This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

The Royal English Arboricultural Society.

SUMMER MEETING AT CHELTENHAM.

THE annual summer meeting of the Royal English Arboricultural Society was held this year in Gloucestershire, from August 12th to 16th, the Queen's Hotel, Cheltenham, being made the headquarters for the week. Members assembled from all parts of the country on Monday, the 12th, and on the evening of that day the annual business meeting took place in the ball-room of the hotel.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

Mr. H. J. ELWES, F.R.S., President of the Society, occupied the chair at the annual general meeting, at 8 o'clock, on Monday, August 12th.

MINUTES.

The PRESIDENT remarked that as the minutes of the last annual meeting were printed in Part I. of the Journal, the members would probably agree with him that they should be taken as read.

Agreed.

Membership.

The President then asked the Assistant Secretary to read the report re membership.

Mr. Edward Davidson presented his report, as follows:—

Report of Membership.

Captain Davidson: I beg to move that letters of condolence be sent to the families of the members of the Society who have passed away during the year.

This was seconded and agreed to.

Financial Statement.

The Assistant Secretary next submitted the financial statement, which is given in extenso at the end of the report.

Mr. GEO. COOPER proposed the adoption of the balance sheet.

Mr. GEO. GALLIE seconded, and the motion was carried.

The PRESIDENT observed that the financial statement was satisfactory. Personally, he did not think it would have turned out so satisfactorily. He was quite certain the publication of the Journal would be one of the most valuable features of the Society's work. (Hear, hear.) Having regard to the very large increase in the membership and to the greatly increased interest taken in the subject of forestry generally, he considered the financial statement encouraging. (Hear, hear.)

SUGGESTED ALTERATION OF RULES.

The PRESIDENT remarked that the next business on the agenda was the election of new officers, but that as Mr. Fisher had given notice of a motion somewhat affecting that matter, he would ask him to proceed with the motion at this stage.

Mr. W. R. FISHER observed that he had to propose two resolutions. The first was: "That the President-elect at any general meeting of the Society shall not enter into his duties until after the close of the annual meeting at which he is elected." He did not think it was very dignified, when the Society went to a certain place, as they did at Exeter last year, that the President for the time being should hand over his chair in the middle of the meeting. (Hear, hear.) The local people did not understand who was President and who was not, and he thought the matter would be made perfectly clear to them if the out-going President remained in charge of the duties of the chair until the close of the meeting. The position would then be this: that the new President would have been elected, but that he would have no duties to perform until the close of the annual meeting at which he was so elected, when, but not till then, he would enter into his functions. That was the proposition he had to make, and he did not think it needed further argument to commend it to the members.

Mr. COWAN seconded the motion, and said it had the unanimous support of the northern members.

The resolution was carried nem dis.

Mr. W. R. FISHER said he had now a second resolution to propose, which, he was afraid, would not be received quite so unanimously as the first motion that had been adopted. The Society, they had just heard from the remarks of the Assistant Secretary, had been growing enormously in importance and in weight throughout England and Wales—and it seemed to him that the time had come when they should have local representation, that England and Wales should be partitioned into local divisions, and that each of those divisions should return a member to the Council. The details of this scheme he had brought forward under a separate motion which appeared in the programme of this meeting; but it seemed that if he proposed that which, in his opinion, was only an explanation of the motion he was now submitting, he should not be within the rules, and therefore he was merely going to put forward his original motion, without any further qualification—the motion as it appeared on the agenda which had been circulated in sufficient time for that meeting. The proposal that he made was: "That England and Wales be divided into twenty districts, each of which shall be represented on one Council." His idea was that the Council as at present constituted, consisting as it did of thirty-seven members, was rather unwieldy, and what was more, was expensive, because the members of the Council had their expenses paid.

The PRESIDENT: If they asked for them.

Mr. FISHER: If they asked for them; and this added considerably to the outgoings of the Society. He was editor of the Journal, and he was anxious to carry on the Journal, and this question of saving a few pounds was important. Besides, when they got representation throughout England and Wales they would probably get the best men to represent forestry, men of influence and position in the country. He proposed next "That the Council, inclusive of the President and Past Presidents, shall be formed of representatives of the different districts, and that the President have the power of selecting certain members of the Council to act as Vice-Presidents during his term of office." This latter part was important, because the President might at any time fall ill, and it was necessary he should in that event be represented by a gentleman who would carry out his own views. He (Mr. Fisher) did not think the senior member of the Council should act for the President. The President had certain views; he had two years of office; and it was important he should be able, whether present or absent, to carry out those views during his term of office, and if at any time a member of the Council, purely on account of seniority, happened to preside and acted in opposition to the views that the President had been elected to carry out, the Society was thrown into confusion. He moved the resolution as printed on the agenda.

Mr. HAVELOCK seconded the motion.

Mr. JOHN GRAHAM remarked that they had each received a copy of the small papers which had been issued since the agenda was sent out. The opinion of the Secretary was, and quite right, that strictly speaking Mr. Fisher was debarred from substituting this notice of motion for the one that he had first submitted. If nothing further were done, it would postpone the business for a whole year. With the view of avoiding that, he (the speaker) proposed to get rid of one difficulty by suggesting a rather peculiar mode of dealing with the motion, but one which he was perfectly satisfied was in accordance with the rules: he was going to have the temerity to move an amendment, the amendment, however, being Mr. Fisher's own notice, which, for the reasons already given, could not be acted upon in the form in which it was given. Mr. Fisher had given them excellent reasons why an alteration should be made, and those reasons he (the speaker) did not propose to enlarge upon: they were sufficiently apparent to every member of the Society who was present and had listened to what Mr. Fisher had said, and there were no dissentient murmurs. If the amendment which he was now about to move were carried, it would effect what Mr. Fisher intended. He therefore proposed:—

"The Council will consist of twenty members, besides including the President and the Past Presidents. Ten of the members of Council will be elected for districts in England and Wales, one for each English district and two for Wales."

The districts will be those adopted by the Board of Agriculture, as follows:—

1. Beds, Hunts, Cambridge, Suffolk, Essex, Herts, Middlesex, and London.
2. Norfolk, Lincoln, and East Riding of Yorkshire.
3. Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Berks, and Hants.
4. Notts, Leicester, Northants, Bucks, Rutland, Oxford, and Warwick.
5. Salop, Worcester, Wilts, Gloucester, Monmouth, and Hereford.
6. Somerset, Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall.
7. Northumberland, Durham, N. & W. Riding of Yorkshire.
8. Cumberland, Westmorland, Lancashire, Derbyshire, and Staffordshire.
9. Wales (2 members).

The other ten members of Council will be elected at an annual meeting.

There will be five Vice-Presidents, one of whom will take the place of the President in case of his absence at any Council or General Meeting.

The Vice-Presidents will be nominated by the President from among the members of Council, and for his term of office only.

The members of Council to be elected for each district will be elected by voting papers sent to every member residing in a district by the Secretary immediately after the annual meeting of the Society. The Council will nominate suitable candidates for these elections, but members can vote for the nominated candidate, or for any other candidate that each member may prefer.

The results of these elections will be reported by the Secretary to the first Council that may meet after the general meeting of the Society.

One-fourth of the members of Council will retire annually, subject to re-election.

They would find that the only alteration now made in the notice as issued by Mr. Fisher was that five (instead of four) Vice-Presidents were to be appointed, and that two of the Vice-Presidents were to be nominated by the President and three others elected. The reason why two instead of one Vice-President were to be nominated by the President was this, that owing to the enormous size of the Society, and the large district covered, it might be difficult to get one to act on all occasions, if only one were appointed as his deputy. He was aware that two were in excess of the number which the mayor of a borough was allowed to indulge in, but he did not know if there were any bye-law or rule which prevented a mayor having more than one deputy. But a mayor in his borough was within a ringed fence, and he had to select his deputy from a limited number of persons, whereas the President of this Society could go all over England and Wales, and surely they would not deprive the President of two strings to his bow if he required them.

Mr. E. R. PRATT seconded the amendment. He thought that to all who had read the scheme it must commend itself as one eminently suitable and desirable. It was certainly desirable that the knowledge and influence of this Society should be spread all over England and Wales, for by that means the number of its members would be increased and its work extended. He trusted that when the list of members was published, as it would be shortly, it would be published in groups and not as formerly, so that individual members might be able to see who their neighbours were. Such a list would be much clearer to understand, and would be of great assistance to a member who was sending out notices or voting papers.

Mr. HAVELOCK remembered that the list of districts would require amending, as some counties were omitted. He did not know, for example, what Cheshire had done to be left out.

The PRESIDENT: That is an oversight, I am sure.

Mr. FISHER: It comes in with Cumberland.

Mr. HAVELOCK said he and others did not like the suggested scheme. He agreed with Mr. Fisher's intention, but they did not like the idea of sweeping away the old Vice-Presidents, and he was going to make a humble suggestion, that if this amendment were passed, it should be referred to the Council for further consideration and to be slightly altered in this respect. He did not, however, propose a resolution on the point.

Mr. GILLANDERS pointed out that the scheme could not take effect till another year. They would this year elect the Council on the old lines. He therefore did not see the object of discussing the matter now.

The PRESIDENT: I ruled that Mr. Fisher's motion and the amendment which follows it should take precedence at the election of the Council, because I thought that the members of the Society should know what is proposed. It seems to me a great pity, when we have such a large number gathered as to-day, to postpone for another year, when we might not have so many members present, the settlement of such an important question as this. I should like to see it settled now, if possible. At the same time, it is not a question so much for the Council to decide as for the general body of members, and as I am to some extent an interested party, I may say that it has been the practice in a great many other Societies for the President to nominate all the Vice-Presidents. Whether that was desirable or not I won't say. I think, with regard to the size of the Council, what Mr. Fisher and what our Secretary have told us is a point that must have consideration, viz., the great expense to the Society of a large number of members having to travel very great distances. It is only natural that these members should expect their expenses paid. We cannot expect members to make long journeys to attend Council meetings at their own expense. Still, the number of Vice-Presidents and representatives on the Council are undoubtedly at present far in excess of what is necessary for the carrying on of the business of the Society, and though we have got on very well hitherto, yet you must have regard to the fact that the Society is growing by leaps and bounds, and that what was desirable when these rules were framed is not necessarily desirable now. Whatever decision you come to, I do think there ought to be a certain proportion—at least one-fourth—who should retire annually from the Council, without being eligible for re-election; because if you don't constantly give opportunity for bringing fresh blood into the Council you lose the valuable services of a great many young men who could do and will do a great deal for this Society. My great reason for the adoption of such a rule as that is, that it is very difficult to voluntarily pass over an old member who has done good service on the Council in favour of a new member, whereas if the rule is for one-fourth to retire annually, you get rid of all difficulty on that score, and new blood is automatically brought in. There would, of course, be nothing to prevent valuable old members coming in again after a year's retirement. At the same time, you ought to give a chance to the young men. If you choose to devolve the business of the Society upon committees, you will get a more manageable committee; but the difficulty is that our members are so much occupied not with their own but with other people's business that they cannot always attend the meetings, as in the case of a Society which has its headquarters in London. We must arrange our councils and our business in such a way that it can be done at the most at four councils in the year, but a Council consisting of over thirty members as at present is unwieldy in size and is costly to the funds of the Society.

Mr. Havelock: I quite agree with the retirement of one-fourth of the Council every year, but that is not included in the amendment. There are one or two things that require reconsideration.

Mr. Geo. Ross begged to propose that the whole question be referred to the Council for reconsideration. He was sorry to be obliged to go against the resolution which was proposed, in the first place, by Mr. Fisher, if only because nobody realised more than he did how much Mr. Fisher had done for the Society; but as the motion and the amendment to it stood he should be obliged to vote against both. It was the most revolutionary motion which had been brought forward at any annual meeting since the inception of the Society. There was no doubt it had its advantages, as had been pointed out by Mr. Fisher and Mr. Graham; still, if they hurriedly passed that resolution they would, by one stroke of the pen, remove from its management men who had been connected with the Society from its inception and men who had worked up the Society to its present position—at all events, men who had been largely instrumental in bringing the Society to the position it attained that night. It was highly probable that very great alterations might be made in the management of the Society, and improvements might be advantageously made; at the same time, it was rather difficult to understand what great objection there could be to the present form of management when they looked at the results secured. (Hear, hear.) That being so, and acknowledging as he did the extremely radical changes that this motion or amendment would make if passed that night, he begged to move its reference to the Council for further consideration. There could be no urgency in the matter. If so, it could have been brought before the Council meeting twelve months ago. Then they must remember that they had a body of rules that were carefully considered and passed no later than twelve months ago. Now they had a new rule proposed which would change the whole character of the Society. He did not say certain alterations might not be necessary, but he did say that before the amendment became a rule of the Society it required to be very carefully considered indeed, on account of the subsequent welfare of the Society. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Cowan seconded this amendment. In the whole history of the Society, he declared that whenever it had been necessary for a Vice-President to take the chair nothing had been done but what would have been done if the President himself had been present. The suggested change, therefore, was not so urgent as had been represented that night. As to the younger men being given an opportunity of serving on the Council, he could say without fear of contradiction that they had been most liberally treated since the formation of the Society. He could not see what would be gained by the proposed change, as under the present system they could introduce new blood into the Council when they chose, and, as he had shown, had done so to the great advantage of the Society. However, he would second Mr. Ross's amendment in favour of a reconsideration by the Council of the whole matter, and hoped this would be carried with a big majority.

The vote was then taken, the President ruling that Mr. Graham's amendment must be put first.

For Mr. Graham's amendment	23
Against „ „	25

The amendment was accordingly lost by two votes.

Mr. Ross then moved his amendment for referring the matter to the Council, and Mr. COWAN seconded this.

Captain DAVIDSON, while admitting the great necessity for improvement in the government of this Society, thought Mr. Fisher would have been well advised if he had given the Council an opportunity of considering these matters before bringing them before the annual meeting. (Hear, hear.) As it was, he, as a member of the Council, had not had an opportunity of discussing either the motion or the amendment with his colleagues, and it was not the usual mode of doing such a thing—of sending in notice of the motion and having it discussed a few minutes before it came up at the annual meeting. This was not giving the members of the Council a fair opportunity of discussing and considering it. It had been said that the Council had recommended nothing. Well, they did not know what to recommend. But there was one thing he did not recommend, and that was hasty, ill-advised, and drastic legislation anywhere, and he thought the members would be well advised if they carried Mr. Ross's amendment by an overwhelming majority—(hear, hear),—so that the matter might go back to the Council and be fairly considered by them before it came before the Society again. (Applause.)

Mr. HAVELOCK said he should be sorry if it were thought he was opposed to the idea Mr. Fisher wished to carry out, but he could not help thinking it would be better to let the matter first come before the Council. If, after that course, the matter came before the Society next year, it would in all probability be carried.

Mr. CLOUGH also thought the proper course was to bring the matter before the Council.

Mr. FISHER quite agreed that the matter had been brought before the members somewhat precipitately. He merely wished to introduce the idea: he did not expect to carry the resolution this time. He should like to say, however, that in spite of the great progress made under the old rules, the very fact of its growth and extension all over England and Wales had necessitated fresh rules. He was perfectly willing to accept the amendment of Mr. Ross that the matter should be considered by the Council. He should himself have brought it before the Council, but the Council meetings were very few, and the matter seemed to him one of urgency. He thought quite enough had been said now to bring the subject before the members generally, and he had no doubt that by next year's meeting the Council would have come to some agreement on the matter. Under those circumstances, he thought the best thing he could do was to withdraw his motion.

Captain DAVIDSON: To show that we as members of the Council are not in opposition to Mr. Fisher's object, I hope someone will bring the matter before the Council.

Mr. FISHER: I will bring it before the Council.

THE NEW OFFICERS.

The PRESIDENT having intimated that the next business was the appointment of the new officers,

Mr. LESLIE WOOD said he had much pleasure in proposing that they elect Mr. Elwes for a second term as President of the Society. (Applause.) He thought they would be unable to find a better man for the post, while no more fitting occasion could be found for conferring the dignity upon Mr. Elwes than that on which they were to be shown over his woodland property, and on which he was entertaining them at Cheltenham. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. COWAN seconded the motion, and said he was sure the members generally appreciated all the hard work Mr. Elwes had done, and was doing, on behalf of the Society. (Applause.)

The motion was unanimously agreed to.

The PRESIDENT, replying, said: I feel deeply the honour you have done me in electing me to this position for the second year. No trouble has been, or will be, too great to me to help on the interest of this Society, or in carrying out its objects, which I have so deeply at heart. (Hear, hear.) I only hope that you will not go away from Gloucestershire with the feeling that you have not done well in coming. At any rate, all the gentlemen whom I have consulted are doing their best, and will do their best, to give you a pleasant time in this neighbourhood. (Applause.)

Mr. GRAHAM proposed Sir Hugh Beevor as a Vice-President. He did not know one of their new members who had taken a greater interest in the Society than Sir Hugh. In the matter of railway rates he had also worked very hard, and as a practical forester he had forestry very much at heart.

Mr. GILLIES seconded, and the motion was carried.

Mr. GILLIES proposed the re-election of Mr. John Scott and Mr. W. Milne as Vice-Presidents.

This was seconded and carried.

Mr. GILLANDERS proposed the re-election of Mr. A. J. Forrest, Mr. W. A. Herd, Mr. Wm. Elder, and Mr. Chas. Hankins, as members of the Council, and that Mr. Thomas Bond take the place of the late Mr. Edward Shipley.

Mr. HAVELOCK seconded, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. FISHER proposed Mr. E. R. Pratt, of Ryston Hall, Downham, Norfolk, as a member of the Council.

Mr. GEORGE MARSHALL seconded, and this was carried.

RESIGNATION OF THE SECRETARY.

The PRESIDENT said he was sorry to have to read the following letter from Mr. John Davidson :—

MR. DAVIDSON'S LETTER OF RESIGNATION.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT,—I much regret that I will not have the pleasure of joining the excursion to your neighbourhood. My health is quite as good as it was last year, I am pleased to say, but my walking powers are deficient, which makes it too much of a toil.

As my son has carried out the secretarial work for the last six years, I consider the time has now arrived when I should retire from that office. As my position was merely a sinecure, I trust the Society will release me.

I cannot retire from this without expressing my deep gratitude for all the kindnesses I have received from every member of the Society, and my mind is stored with pleasant memories of all the harmonious gatherings that I have been privileged to attend, and, though resigning this office, I still anticipate the pleasure of taking some part in those of the future. Yours truly,

August 18th, 1907. JOHN DAVIDSON.

H. J. ELWES, Esq., F.R.S.,
President Royal English Arboricultural Society.

The President, continuing, said he was sure there was no man who had done so much for the Society as had Mr. Davidson, and no man who was so generally popular. (Hear, hear.) He thought they could congratulate themselves upon having such a worthy successor as Mr. Davidson's son, who had really done the duties of late; and he felt sure that, in the first place, they would carry a unanimous vote of thanks to Mr. Davidson, sen., for his services, and of regret that he felt called upon to give up the office, and expressing the hope that he would live many years to attend their meetings. That, he was sure, they would carry unanimously. (Applause.)

The New Secretary.

Mr. Graham (Durham) remarked that they all agreed with what the President had said, and with the expression of their extreme regret at losing their old and valued friend, Mr. Davidson, sen., the father of the Society, to whom they were very much indebted for the existence of the Society. Mr. Davidson had to meet all the difficulties attendant on the organisation of such a Society as theirs had grown to be; and they all loved him as a dear friend. They did not look upon him simply as an officer of the Society: they esteemed him as a friend, and they were all delighted to see him at their meetings. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Davidson never absented himself until he found it impossible to attend. They had a very pleasant gathering once in London, when their feelings of admiration for Mr. Davidson took the form not only of an address but of the presentation to him of a testimonial which he (the speaker) was sure he greatly valued. Since then, owing to infirmity, he had not been able to give them so much of his personal service as he would have wished and they would have liked, but they had found that his work had been admirably done by his son, Mr. Edward Davidson; and what he (the speaker) proposed was this: He was sure it would meet with their cordial approval, and that he should not divide them on this question, nor should be beaten on the matter. He was sure that with one voice and one mind they would appoint Mr. Edward Davidson as the worthy successor to his good father, and that was the proposition which he made. (Applause.) That Mr. Edward Davidson had splendid powers of organisation they had had proof both at home and abroad; they had been indebted to him for all their later meetings, and if they searched the country through they would not find a better successor to his worthy father. (Hear, hear.) Then he hoped they would not continue to pay the new Secretary at the very moderate rate that they had been paying in the past. He not only asked them to appoint Mr. Edward Davidson to the office, but to give him something like a proper recognition of what those services were worth. There was an excuse when they were a smaller Society and could not afford a high salary, for the small remuneration they paid to his father; but he suggested that in addition to appointing Mr. Edward Davidson Secretary and Treasurer, he should also, he moved, have at least £60, instead of £40, between himself and his father. He should like to say a good deal more on that pleasant and interesting subject, but business had to be attended to, and he would say no more. He finally proposed that Mr. Edward Davidson succeed his father at £60 a year.

Mr. GEORGE MARSHALL (Liphook, Hants) seconded the motion, and said he also had great pleasure in supporting what Mr. Graham had said about the Secretary. No man had ever worked harder for the Society than had Mr. Edward Davidson during the past few years, for he did most of the work, and he (Mr. Marshall) was sure they ought not to hesitate about raising his salary to £60 a year.

Alderman CLOUGH (Gateshead) heartily endorsed all that had been said about Mr. Edward Davidson, who was a worthy son of a worthy sire. There was one thing which he (the speaker) had noticed, but which had not been mentioned, and that was that the office of Secretary was an annual one. He did not think their Secretary should retire every year. He did not know if there was a rule on the subject, but he thought it unnecessary that the Secretary should retire each year. It would be better to make the appointment a permanent one, with six months' notice on either side. He did know any other Society which followed their plan.

The resolution was put and carried unanimously.

Mr. EDWARD DAVIDSON—I am very much obliged and feel greatly honoured at having been elected Secretary in succession to my father. I have been brought up along with this Society. The pleasantest part of my life has been spent in working for it, and I hope that in the future I shall do my duty towards it and towards the members, and so merit the kind words which have been said concerning me. (Hear, hear.) I thank you very much indeed.

Auditors.

Mr. Havelock proposed that Mr. Bernard Cowan and Mr. Clough be re-appointed Auditors, and this was seconded and agreed to.

Local Secretaries.

Principal Smith Hill: In view of the changes contemplated, possibly the Local Secretaries might be merged into the representatives on the Council. I propose that they be re-elected en bloc for this year.

Mr. Bowker seconded, and the motion was carried.

Judges of Essays.

Mr. Fisher proposed that Mr. Henry, who had been appointed Reader in Forestry at Cambridge, be one of the Judges of Essays. Mr. Henry had had great experience in forestry. He had travelled a great deal in China, Japan, Canada, and in other countries, and he was also co-author with the President of a remarkable book now being published on forestry. He did not think they could have a better judge than Mr. Henry, and he proposed that gentleman in place of Mr. Gray, retired.

The President, in Mr. Henry's absence, could not say if he would act, but hoped he would do so.

Mr. Havelock seconded the motion, and it was agreed to.

Mr. A. C. Forbes and Mr. Fisher were also again chosen in the same capacity.

Forestry Examiners.

Mr. Clough proposed the re-election of Mr. W. Forbes, Mr. W. B. Havelock, and Principal J. Smith Hill, as Forestry Examiners.

Mr. Cowan seconded, and this was carried.

Competitive Essays.

The Secretary read the report of the Judges on the Competitive Essays, and the following awards were made:—

For an essay on—

"The Taxation of Land under Woods, Plantations, and Coppices," by Mr. Cyril H. Donne, Rickmansworth (Gold Medal); by Mr. Robert Anderson, Cirencester (Silver Medal).

"The Difference between State and Private Forestry," by Mr. A. P. Grenfell of Bridgwater (Silver Medal).

"The Conversion of Underwood and Coppice-with-standards into High Wood," by Mr. F. H. Osmond-Smith, Southsea (Silver Medal).

"Fencing," by Mr. John C. Archibald Langwathby (Silver Medal).

The Publication Committee.

The Secretary presented the Report of the Publication Committee, as follows:—

Your Committee has had two meetings: one at Derby on February 15th, 1907, and one at London on April 5th, 1907.

At the first meeting the question of the cost of the quarterly Journal of Forestry, was taken into consideration, and at the second meeting Mr. Fisher, the honorary editor, submitted an estimate from Messrs. Bradbury, Agnew & Co. for the printing of same, which, after a revised tender had been received from Messrs. Coward, of Carlisle, was accepted, and the printing is now done by Messrs. Bradbury, Agnew & Co.

Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. continue to act as publishers.

The cost of the Journal up to the present has been as follows:—

STATEMENT OF COST OF QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF FORESTRY. PARTS I., II., III.

Payments.

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Printing (including transactions in Part I.) and illustrations	190	14	0
Postages	27	1	8
Railway carriages, Mr. A. C. Forbes' expenses, and other small items ...	5	4	4
Proportion of cost of Committee meetings	10	0	0
				233	0	0

Receipts.

Sale of Journals	4	4	6
Irish Forestry Society for printing their Transactions...	4	0	0
Irish Forestry Society for Journals supplied	7	10	0
Advertisements	15	17	6
				31	12	0
Deficit balance				£202	8	0

As the Transactions usually cost about £100, the actual deficit on the three parts of the Journal is, in round figures, about £100.

It is under consideration to appoint an Advertising Agent, and your Committee hope before another year to greatly increase the revenue from this source.

The Irish Forestry Society takes fifty copies of the Journal at a price of 3*s*. each per annum, but this arrangement is only for one year, and more favourable terms are under progress. The Irish Society's Transactions have been printed in the last issue of the Journal, the cost of which was borne by that Society.

The Council wish to accord their thanks to Mr. A. C. Forbes for having honorarily edited the first number of the Journal as honorary editor. In consequence of his leaving for Ireland to take up a Government appointment there, Mr. Forbes could not see his way to continue to act as editor, and it will be remembered that at the last annual meeting Mr. Fisher agreed to edit the Journal. The Council wish also to record their appreciation of the services of Mr. Fisher, who also acts in an honorary capacity.

Your Committee hope that in the course of the ensuing year the JOURNAL OF FORESTRY will become much more widely known, and that as a result there will be greater revenue from sales and advertisements, and that it will also continue to be a means of attracting many new members to the Society.

The report was adopted.

PROPOSED ALTERATION OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

In accordance with notice given, Mr. J. P. Robertson moved:—

"1. That the last portion of Rule 3 shall read:

'The annual subscription of Members from 1st August 1907, shall be:

'1—Owners of Woodlands, the valuation of whose Land exceeds £500 per annum, and others, 21*s.*

'2—Owners of Woodlands, the valuation of whose Land does not exceed £500 per annum, Agents, Nurserymen, Timber Merchants, Associate Members, and others, 12*s.* 6*d.*

'3—Head-foresters and Head-gardeners, 8*s.*

'4—Assistant Foresters and Gardeners, 5*s.*'

"Life-Members elected prior to 1st August, 1907, be asked to contribute 3*s.* annually towards cost of JOURNAL OF FORESTRY.

"2. That Rule 4 shall read:

'Any ordinary Member may become a Life Member by compounding for his annual subscription by a single payment; those of the first class by paying Twelve Guineas; those of the second class Eight Guineas; and those of the third class Five Guineas.'"

He said: As this resolution is intended to embrace all members of the Society—including those who have joined prior to 1st August, 1907, as well as those who may be admitted at this or at subsequent meetings—a word of explanation is due, as it may seem a little harsh to the older members. Those of you who were present at the annual meeting last year will remember that in the interests of the Society, as well as to keep up its status, it was deemed necessary to issue a JOURNAL OF FORESTRY, of which three numbers have been put before you; and which, I think, has been a decided success. This journal, of course, entails a certain amount of expense that must be met in some way or other, and for this purpose it was agreed to raise the subscriptions. You will also further remember that in passing the rule (which this resolution is proposing to alter), wherein it is stated, that all members who have joined prior to August 1st, 1907, may continue to pay the old rate of subscription, and all who may be admitted after that date will pay the full subscription as it now stands. Although not made exactly obligatory, yet all members were put on their honour, and it was hoped, and as far as I understand, fully agreed to at that meeting, that all members would pay at the increased rate. Now, although this was exceeding loyal and generous on the part of the older members, yet for many, and especially for those whom I have tried to embrace in section 2 of my division of members—owners of woodlands, whose land valuation does not exceed £500 annually, agents, nurserymen, timber-merchants, associate members, and others—I think it is rather hard to ask them to increase their subscriptions from 10*s.* 6*d.* to 21*s.*, especially as this class have many calls of a similar kind to meet. Besides, it must not be forgotten that in heightening the subscriptions for this class, we are probably depriving ourselves of many members who might join at the lower figure, but cannot, or do not care to do so, at the higher. Then, when subscriptions were heightened to meet the increased expenditure, there is one class that seems to me to have been more or less overlooked—life-members who had joined the Society prior to August 1st, 1907. When such members were admitted into this Society no JOURNAL OF FORESTRY was contemplated, hence they are receiving a benefit for which they have not paid; and as in these days we cannot afford to give anything for nothing, I think it only fair to ask them to contribute towards the increased cost. Neither do I think it right that the cost of this journal should be altogether placed on the shoulders of the younger members. We are all reaping the benefit, and, personally, I think we should all equally share the cost. In saying this I do not for one moment forget the obligations under which this Society rests to the older members, to whom it not only owes its original inception, but by whose indefatigable exertions it has grown to its present great dimensions, which, of itself, entails alterations that could not have been foreseen at the time this Society had its humble origin, and of which the necessity of running this journal is possibly one of the greatest. Now, gentlemen, as this rule now stands, is it not on business lines? Therefore, my resolution is intended as an endeavour to fix the subscriptions once for all, but on the lines of least resistance, and thus to save future trouble. I have tried as far as possible to let the old rates of subscription stand, plus the cost of the JOURNAL OF FORESTRY to each member. You have all had three numbers of this journal, and will be fully able to judge of its merits, and I am sure all of you who have the interests of this Society at heart will agree with me that four numbers annually of such a journal are well worth the 3*s.* or so that would be put on to the old rate of subscription, and this our worthy Editor, Mr. Fisher, and our Secretary, Mr. Davidson, assure us will fully cover the cost of the Journal. Besides, the standing of this Society demands that we should have a journal of some kind. We are now about 1,000 strong, and ought certainly to endeavour to do something towards lifting this Society to the level of other forestry societies abroad, which issue forestry publications that are far ahead of anything we are likely to be able to do for some time, and in regard to which we ought not to take a back seat. To say nothing of the fact that the chief object of this Society, put roughly, is, according to Rule 2, "To disseminate a knowledge of forest matters," and, certainly, outside the Journal, we do not attempt much of this at present. I hope, therefore, that the old members, who were so loyal to us last year, in agreeing to pay an increased subscription when it was not made obligatory, will see the force of my arguments, and will remain equally loyal in an endeavour to put this rule on hard and fast business lines.

Mr. GILLANDERS seconded the motion. He remarked that it was most unbusinesslike to have two rates of subscription. All of them were honourable men and might pay at the new rate, but he had grave doubt that all would pay them if it were left to their honour, and he thought it necessary that the question should be settled now, because from this date onwards the rates of subscription might go on increasing. The proposal was to raise the old half-guinea members' rate by 2*s.* 6*d.*, which was surely not a great hardship, and would not be difficult to meet. Then they were going to raise the rates for head-foresters and gardeners 3*s.* per annum. Speaking as one of them, and as one who had not too much money to spend, he was more than willing to pay the increased subscription of 3*s.* to get the Journal. He also cordially approved of the other proposed changes.

Mr. LESLIE WOOD said he was sorry he could not agree with the resolution. He thought it a pity that amongst themselves they could not always agree; still, this was a very important question, and one which he feared the members did not quite grasp from the speeches that had been made in its support. At any rate, he thought that before they voted for or against it they ought to know the true facts of the case, so that if they got landed into bankruptcy—(A voice: "We are bankrupts already")—if they got landed into deeper bankruptcy, they would get there with their eyes open. He asked them to vote against it for this reason. When the Council came to tackle this question in connection with the rules, one of the most difficult points they had to decide was the question of the annual subscription. They were dealing with two points. On the one hand they had the question of the Journal, knowing perfectly well that that was an advantage to the Society, and knowing that they had not got the money to pay for it. The question of the subscription came up on a recommendation by a committee that the subscription should be raised for those members who were put in the first class under the existing rules, that was to say, that the owners of woodlands, nurserymen, agents, timber merchants, and even the existing members should be asked to pay a guinea a year. (A voice: "Too much"). They found, however, that amongst a good many members there was a strong feeling that to raise the subscription from half-a-guinea to a guinea a year was too much, and as a compromise it was agreed by the Council and brought before the Society and unanimously agreed by the members that only new members should be asked to contribute the larger sum and that the existing members should go on at the old rate of half-a-guinea a year. (Hear, hear.) Now Mr. Robertson told them, and no doubt he was correct, that the members were put on their honour that they should pay the increased rate, and he (the speaker) remembered perfectly well at the time, some who took part in the discussion, saying that with increased advantages of the Journal they would not mind paying the increased rate. But how many had paid the increased rate? Did they think a tenth part of the 900 members had done so. Did they think a twentieth part had paid? Did they think a couple of dozen had done so? The Secretary told him he thought that less than a dozen had paid the guinea. Then Mr. Robertson wished to lay down a definite rate so that the Society should try to place itself on a proper financial basis for the future. When the report of the Finance Committee was read they heard that there was a substantial balance at the bank, and the President said they must congratulate themselves on the sound position of the finances, a remark at which they clapped their hands. But the bank balance, as business men knew, was no criterion of financial stability, and in this case it was particularly no criterion, because every year there were paid in moneys from life members, at the rate of five guineas each, and it had been customary to treat those moneys entirely as revenue. About three years ago, under the advice of a committee appointed to deal with this question, the Council decided to estimate each year what their actual liability was to the members, taking into account the liability to life-members, because if the latter paid five guineas the Society owed them so much each year for it. Last year it was estimated that they were about £68 to the bad on the capital account; this year they would have noticed the amount was over £110. They had got a lot more money in the bank, but they were £50 nearer to the rocks of bankruptcy. To relieve this stress Mr. Robertson proposed this resolution, and what did it mean? They found that three copies of the Journal cost them £202 gross; the Transactions used to cost them £100. Now it was intended to issue four copies, and that would cost them about £130. There were 900 members: 900 members at 2*s.* a year would bring in £90. So that on the basis of Mr. Robertson's proposal they would get £40 deeper in bankruptcy every year. It was a simple question of arithmetic. Were they going to vote for that? He was perfectly agreed that the present arrangement was unsatisfactory, but unless they were willing to raise the subscription to more than 12*s.* 6*d.* and make it permanently 15*s.* or some higher figure, they must stick to the present arrangement. Under the present arrangement, every new member of the first class paid a guinea subscription. Next year they might get an extra £100, in the following year it would be £150, and their finances would gradually get upon a firm basis if they were to rest as at present. But if they insisted upon carrying Mr. Robertson's resolution they were bound to go upon the rocks. That was a plain and simple statement which could not be refuted. He intended to vote against the resolution, and if they had the interests of the Society at heart they would do the same.

The Secretary: With regard to the matter of subscriptions, possibly the reason that many of the existing members did not pay the increased rate is to be explained by the fact that they were not officially asked to do so. It was to be a voluntary act on their part, and I could not ask them to increase their subscription under those circumstances. We sent out the applications on the old basis, and perhaps members did not give the matter a thought.

In reply to a question, the Secretary said they started the year with 810 members, and closed with 914.

Mr. Wood: The increased subscription does not come into force till next year.

The PRESIDENT: I don't think there has been time to see how the increased subscription will affect the membership. I have asked several gentlemen to join, and not one has refused. I firmly believe that if you will make the advantages of membership what they ought to be, people will not hesitate to join; but what I think is that it is a thoroughly unbusinesslike way of doing things to have two different rates of subscription, depending upon the time you join. (Hear, hear.) As to putting members upon their honour, nobody ever dreamt or thought about the matter when the request for their subscription came. If it had been put in the way Mr. Leslie Wood states there would have been a very much larger response.

Captain DAVIDSON remarked that in his experience it was an unusual thing to have more than one rate of subscription. He pointed out the increased advantages now offered by the Society as compared with twenty years ago, and said it was no hardship for those now joining to pay a guinea subscription.

Mr. COWAN remarked that as far as foresters and gardeners were concerned the subscription was increased considerably, but for landowners it was increased only 25 per cent. Many of the members who were paying 5s. only would have thei r subscriptions raised 125 per cent.

Mr. HAVELOCK: When the increased subscription comes into force, will that put the Society into a solvent position?

Mr. LESLIE WOOD: Yes, I estimate it will, if members come in at the same rate as now. We have had fifteen new members since the new rules came into operation, and I don't think there will be any falling off in the numbers who join. I know the land agents don't mind the increased subscription if they get value for their money. When I first joined the Society, not very many years ago, there were in it three members of the Surveyors' Institution; last year there were twenty. These are the men who will deal with estates and who will push forestry forward. I don't believe they will mind paying a guinea for a minute, because they will get good value for their money.

Mr. ROBERTSON, replying, remarked that Mr. Wood had assured them that if they allowed this rule to stand as at present they would go on swimmingly, and that if they passed his (the speaker's) resolution they would come to bankruptcy. He could not quite see it. According to the rule, the old members might continue to pay at the old rate, which was very considerably less than what he had proposed they should pay. They could not possibly calculate what they were going to get from new members, but they could calculate what would come from the old members at a given rate. His proposition would meet the cost of the Journal, as 3s. had been calculated to cover the entire cost. Mr. Wood had pointed out the very small proportion of members who had paid the increased subscription. He (the speaker) had not paid it, for the simple reason that he did not understand that this year the Journal was published at a loss: he understood that payment at the old rate would cover the cost this year.

A member asked if Mr. Robertson's resolution would bind the old members who had been elected on the old subscription.

The PRESIDENT: I assume there is nothing in the rules to prevent a vote carried by the Society from binding all its members. Everything is in order. The only thing is the voting.

Mr. HAVELOCK: Is it intended to bind both old and new members?

Mr. GILLANDERS: Yes.

The resolution was then put, and lost.

SUBJECTS FOR ESSAYS.

This matter was referred to the Council.

1908 Summer Meeting.

Suggestions being invited for the place of the Summer Meeting of 1908, Germany, Ireland, Sweden, and Denmark were mentioned, and the matter was referred to the Council.

Museum.

Mr. Marshall remarked that one of the objects of the Society was to form a museum, but no steps had as yet been taken to carry this out.

The President said the subject had engaged the attention of the Council, but the difficulty was that if they had a museum they had nowhere to put it, and that it would entail a large expense in maintenance. They would have to provide a curator, for example. London was the only place for such a museum, and if they could make arrangements with some kindred society to house it for them they would save a lot of expense.

The Retiring Secretary.

Captain Davidson observed that the Society had had the advantage of Mr. John Davidson's services as Secretary for many years, and he should like to propose that they make him an honorary life-member in recognition of those services.

Mr. Cowan seconded the proposition.

Mr. Marshall supported it, remarking that life-membership was limited to 30, and there were two vacancies.

The motion was put and agreed to.

Thanks to the President.

Mr. Pratt proposed a vote of thanks to the President for his conduct in the chair and for the great energy and devotion he had shown in promoting the interests of the Society.

The vote was carried by acclamation, and the President having briefly acknowledged it, the proceedings terminated.

THE ANNUAL DINNER.

The annual dinner was held at the Queen's Hotel on Wednesday evening, August 14th, 1907, the President occupying the chair.

"The King" was proposed from the chair and drunk with musical honours.

The PRESIDENT said the next toast on the list was "The Navy and Army," and he was going to couple with it the name of Captain Steuart. Whatever they read in the papers concerning the services, he believed there were men in the army and navy to-day who were just as ready to do their duty as they did it six years ago. (Applause.)

Captain J. M. STEUART said he rose to respond to the toast because he had been asked to do so, not because he felt he possessed any special qualification for the task. He took it that if there was a slight apathy when this toast was drunk it was not because of the real feeling which underlay the toast. That feeling was that there was an intention on the part of those in the services to do their duty when the occasion arose, and the only fault that he had to find was that they did not make their preparations soon enough. (Hear, hear.) He fancied that if they took an example from the Germans they would, like them, make every preparation, and be able to say when they had done so that nothing but a miracle would stop them. However, they adopted the old-fashioned way, and trusted to British pluck to carry them through. He thought that spirit was not yet dead, and as to the pessimistic utterances in the Press to the effect that the country was decadent, he believed that if the occasion arose the army and navy would prove that this was quite untrue. (Applause.)

Mr. G. MARSHALL proposed "The Proprietors of the Estates we have visited and are invited to visit." He was sure they would agree with him that so far in their annual meetings they had never had a better programme than they had had this year. (Hear, hear.) He thought they would also agree with him that this was about the largest meeting they had ever had, and that everybody present had taken a great deal more interest in what they had seen and heard than they had done on any previous occasion. This was all a sign of the way in which forestry was coming to the front. But he had not to do with that topic now; he had only to bear testimony, as they would all do, to the wonderful kindness and the lavish hospitality they had received wherever they had been. (Applause.) He would say that it was not only on this occasion that they had received kindness and hospitality, but that wherever they had been they had always been treated well and entertained by the proprietors of the land they had been privileged to go over. (Hear, hear.) He believed it was mainly owing to these pleasant tours and to the information which they picked up in going over these estates that the present success of the Society was due. He would not keep them longer, because they had had a long day and would have a longer one to-morrow, but would ask them to drink the health of Lord Bathurst, Mr. Elwes, Lord Ducie, Mr. Stafford Howard, and Lady Smyth, the first two of whose estates they had been over, and the last three of whose estates they would be visiting on Thursday and Friday. He coupled with the toast the name of their worthy President, whom he was sure they would excuse from making a long speech after the able manner in which he had explained everything that day. He also begged to couple the name of Mr. J. J. Harle, Lord Ducie's agent, and the name of Mr. Popert, Assistant Surveyor, Forest of Dean, whose places they would be looking over the following day. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT remarked that they had drunk his health once before that day, and he did not know why they had repeated the compliment. However, Mr. Marshall had given a reason why he (Mr. Elwes) should not say much now—(laughter)—and he would act on that hint. What he did feel was that, so far as he personally was concerned, whatever pleasure they might possibly have derived from seeing these estates, the proprietors were, or ought all to be, deeply indebted to the members of the Society for the very valuable hints that were sometimes gained, and many more they hoped to get; for although he put questions and got answers which he hoped would enable him to secure better results, there were two or three knotty problems which even out of the concentrated knowledge of this Society he had not been able so far to solve, and he felt that they ought not to drop these things and give them up as unexplainable. There was an answer to them, and what he suggested they should do was to arrange for conferences and discussions to take place after their annual meetings, so that these matters might be again brought forward and some satisfactory result reached. These convivial gatherings were very nice indeed, but they had also to talk over what they had seen and done, and if they could have a discussion on some of the interesting points brought out in connection with the science they had at heart, he believed more practical advantage would come of these annual meetings than had hitherto been the case. (Hear, hear.) He was only throwing this out as a hint, because, of course, time was a difficulty. Then with regard to the papers for which medals were awarded, he thought they should look for original work in them. Everybody who had read Mr. Forbes's paper on the afforestation of waste land would agree with him that it was a very valuable contribution to the discussion of the subject. (Hear, hear.) Reverting to the matter of conferences, the President said he knew of no Society which gave so much time to the discussion of papers as did the Surveyors' Institution, and remarked that the publication of the views expressed at those discussions was a most admirable and valuable course to take. He trusted that, later on, this Society would be in a position to imitate the practice, and, concluding, said he hoped this would not be the last time they would visit Colesborne. (Applause.)

Mr. J. J. HARLE, in thanking the company on behalf of the Earl of Ducie for the very kind and hearty manner in which they had responded to the toast of his health, said he hoped the weather would be favourable for the party to visit Tortworth, for nothing would give his lordship greater pleasure than to be informed that the Society had spent a pleasant day in looking over his collection of trees; though Lord Ducie would be some hundreds of miles away, yet his heart would carry back his thoughts to Tortworth, for there was no doubt that his heart was in his trees, and nothing delighted him more than to show them to some expert who was a real lover of trees. Some of the most noted arboriculturists of the day had inspected the trees, including Mr. Elwes, Dr. Schlich, Mr. Fisher, and many others; yet he ventured to say that there never had been such a party there before as would be at Tortworth on the following day, when the distinguished band of practical experts on forestry, whom he saw before him, would attend. (Hear, hear.) Lord Ducie was now over eighty years of age, and had been in possession of his estates for fifty-five years. His lordship was thus one of the very few landlords who had had the good fortune to cut down matured forest trees which he had himself planted in his early life. He (Mr. Harle) hoped to show them on the following day a plantation which Lord Ducie planted with Spanish chestnut fifty-two years ago. It was planted on old red sandstone, which was most suitable for Spanish chestnut. At all events, those trees grew remarkably well, and twenty-two years ago, when he (Mr. Harle) required a very large quantity of wooden fencing to protect a mile and a half of newly planted trees, he obtained thinnings thirty years old from that wood and used them for the purpose. The trees were cut and split into three or four posts as size would allow, and the upper portions were split into rails. He emphasised the fact that the timber was split, because he was of opinion that if it had been sawn it would not have lasted so long; and it was a great delight to him to be able to say that those thirty-year-old thinnings of Spanish chestnut were practically sound to-day. (Applause.) In fact, at the present moment some of the fencing was being taken up and removed to do similar duty in another part of the estate. His experience pointed to the conclusion that, granted the soil was suitable and the climate that of the South of England, Spanish chestnut was the best tree that could be used upon an estate. Oaks and larches were planted at Tortworth about the same time as the Spanish chestnut, and some of their timber had also been used for fencing, but the difference in the durability was marvellous. Thirty-year-old oak was absolutely useless after ten years. Larch was rather more satisfactory, but the Spanish chestnut was the most serviceable of all; it was quite as firm and as good as the day when it was cut down. (Applause.) He would not take up their time longer, but would say that that night he was only a visitor. He had, however, had the honour of being elected a member of this Society, and he hoped in the future to go many a pleasant excursion with them and to be allowed to pick the brains of the experts next day and on many another occasion. (Applause.)

Mr. E. P. POPERT said he regretted very much that the Commissioner, Mr. Stafford Howard, was not present to respond, as he would have done much better justice to the toast than he (Mr. Popert) could possibly do. Though on the following day they certainly were not likely to see things they had never seen before, yet he hoped they might see something which would interest them and from which they might pick up a little information. The High Meadow Woods, he might tell them, were bought by the Crown in the year 1817; they consisted of about 3,000 acres, some 1,000 acres of which were then a forest. The whole had now been planted. It was at first treated under practically no system at all. About fifty years ago, however, a gentleman was sent down to report upon the forest and to offer suggestions. He (the speaker) thought the only suggestions the inspector made were that about a hundred acres a year of the High Meadow Woods should be cleared and replanted, and that the rest of the Woods should be cleared of the coppice-wood, to improve the growth of oak. He (Mr. Popert) was glad to say that neither of those suggestions was carried out. Ten years ago, Mr. H. C. Hill, the Inspector-General of Forests to the Government of India, came down and made a working-plan, and upon that plan they had been acting ever since. The plan, they found, answered exceedingly well. Of course, it had been modified to suit circumstances. They would see on the following day that under favourable conditions and suitable soil larch could grow there exceedingly well, and he was equally certain that under proper treatment they could grow oak in the High Meadow Woods which would compare for girth and height with the growth of oak in any of the woods on the Continent. (Hear, hear.) He hoped that at the High Meadow Woods they would see something that would interest them, and in the name of Mr. Stafford Howard he again thanked them for the manner in which the toast had been drunk.

Mr. A. BLUNDELL (New Zealand) said he had been asked to lay before them the toast of the evening—"The Royal English Arboricultural Society,"—and he did so with great diffidence. He certainly should not have complied with the request did he not, like every Britisher, feel great difficulty in saying "No" when he was asked to do anything. He wished from the bottom of his heart to thank every member of the Association, and particularly their splendid Chairman—(hear, hear),—for he had never in all his life spent two such pleasant days or enjoyed such unbounded hospitality as he had on these last two days, when he had been privileged to see into things in which he was keenly interested. In a small way he was a forester in a very far-off land, and was doing what numbers of others were doing—viz., the very best they could to make a new Britain in the South. (Applause.) In the opinion of nearly all the people with whom he was acquainted in New Zealand no better copy could be had than the best things to be found in the dear old land, and he was going back to New Zealand with more grateful feelings and with more love than ever for the dear old country. (Applause.) His friends, when he got back, would be more than glad to hear what he had to tell them of this wonderful week they had spent in Cheltenham and the district. Without detaining them further, therefore, he gave the toast with all heartiness, and coupled with it the name of their honoured President. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT said he was sure they were all deeply obliged to Mr. Blundell for his very kind words, and on their behalf he wished to cordially thank the proposer of the toast. As for himself, to be toasted three times in one day was a little too much, and he thought it would have been better if they had got someone else to respond. He would content himself with saying that he hoped this Society would continue to grow in numbers, in influence, and in work, as it had done since he had had the honour to be its President. (Applause.)

Mr. FISHER rose to propose "Kindred Societies." He remarked that he was much more at home in the woods than at a dinner, that he was quite accustomed to talk in the woods, but not much accustomed to speak after dinner. However, on this occasion he had the very pleasantest of tasks, which he was delighted to carry out to the best of his ability. They had to drink to the health of kindred societies. The first society to which a number of gentlemen present were proud to belong, a society which preceded their own in the number of its years, was the Royal Scottish Arboricultural Society. (Hear, hear.) He had the honour to be a member of that society himself, and he also had the pleasure of taking about one hundred members of the Society to the French forests, when he saw what thoroughly good men they were, how keen they were about forestry, and how extremely they enjoyed the French forests, which the English arboriculturists had themselves seen. He knew there were a good many members of the Scottish society present besides himself. He did not know Scotland nearly well enough, though he had been at two Scottish Universities, St. Andrews and Edinburgh, and he had had some of the pleasantest times of his life with Scotsmen. And he must say that if there was a country in the United Kingdom where forestry had a great future it was Scotland. Mr. Henry had stated that the climate of the western highlands was practically the same as that of parts of the Pacific Coast, and that there was not the slightest reason why the granite rocks, which were now used for grazing an insignificant number of sheep, should not produce, with their copious rainfall, forests of equal value to those in the west of the American continent. He (the speaker) himself went last year with Sir Herbert Maxwell and Sir John Maxwell to Benmore in Argyllshire, and anything more beautiful than the Douglas fir and giant thuya there he had never seen. Oak could be grown to perfection only in the south. Scotch pine, he believed, was grown on the Woburn estate equal to any in Scotland, and Dr. Schlich had told him he had never seen better in Germany.

But, as a rule, conifers were better in the north than in this part of Britain. He proposed the health of the Scottish Society, coupled with the name of one of its most distinguished members, Mr. Gillanders. (Applause.) Mr. Gillanders was well known to them, and had been so for years. They had listened to his instructive lectures on those destructive insects which imbibed the sap of their trees, ate the leaves, and did injury in every kind of way; and he was glad to hear that Blackwood & Co. had in hand a book from his pen. (Hear, hear.) So that instead of having to go to German works for a knowledge of the insects which ravaged their own forests, they would have a real British Work on the subject, and he was sure they would be glad to drink the health of the Scottish Society, coupled with the name of Mr. Gillanders. (Applause.) He (Mr. Fisher) was afraid that the toast he had been asked to propose was of a most multiple character; he had to submit the health of four societies, and he had not the slightest doubt that if he were to properly dilate on the merits of those societies that he should have to detain them until they slept in their chairs. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) The next society whose health he should propose was that of the Irish Forestry Society. (Applause.) The one society with which their own was affiliated was the Irish Society. A member of that society had assisted at the counsels of the Royal English Arboricultural Society, their annual report was printed in the journal of this Society, and they were united to them in a way that he wished that every Irishman was united with every Englishman in the British Isles. (Hear, hear.) They had a distinguished Irishman present with them that evening. He alluded to Mr. Augustine Henry. (Applause.) Mr. Henry commenced work in China. He believed Irishmen in Ireland did not admire the Government; they were always down on the Government of the moment. But when they got to a foreign country or to one of our colonies they were the most zealous supporters of the Government. Mr. Henry had supported Government interests in China for a number of years, and he had come back from China with a mass of spoil—a most beautiful collection of plants, which he had taken to Kew, and which had gained the admiration of all the botanists there.

Since then—quite recently—Mr. Henry had studied at the same school that he (Mr. Fisher) and several others present had studied, the great forest school of Nancy, in France. They had also to-day enjoyed the company of a distinguished French officer who had studied there, Mr. Leddet, the Conservator of Forests at Paris. Mr. Henry was a distinguished pupil of that school. After this training in botany and in forestry, and after having travelled in every part of the habitable globe in search of specimens, he had been appointed Reader in Forestry at the University of Cambridge, and he (the speaker) thought the Royal English Arboricultural Society would be delighted that Mr. Henry should respond for this part of the toast. (Hear, hear.) Continuing, Mr. Fisher said he was like the parson with his first, second, and third; he had now come to number three, which was the Land-Agents' Society. He had the greatest respect for land-agents. Anyone who went over Lord Bathurst's woods with Mr. Robert Anderson would see what an ideal land-agent ought to be. He had always found Mr. Anderson most helpful in every way. He (the speaker) brought his students from Oxford to Cirencester, and from what he saw believed that there was no more hard-working, industrious, and intelligent agent in the country than Lord Bathurst's agent. (Applause.) There were landowners who did not attend personally to their estates, and there were other landowners whose business in politics and in other public matters took them away from their estates, but both of these classes, they found, left their estates with the greatest confidence in the hands of these able men, the land-agents. He must say one word more about them, and that was that many of the younger men among them were taking such a deep interest in forestry that in the next twenty-five years he expected that the land-agent, who was not just as fit to manage woods as the farms which he had to look after, would have ceased to exist. If they had one subject of which they were proud, and which promised so well for the future, it was the fact that the younger men were taking to forestry in the keenest possible manner. He believed that in their young men the future of British forestry was involved. He had great pleasure in coupling with this toast the name of Mr. Cowper Coles, who was an experienced agent, a capable manager, and who, besides, did a vast amount of public work; because they must not consider that land-agents did only the work attaching to their office, as such: they did a large amount of public work for nothing. (Hear, hear.) He came now to the last of the Societies in the toast—the Surveyors' Institution. He quite agreed with what the President had said, that if there was a question dealing with forestry which came under the cognizance of the Surveyors' Institution, that body always got a capable man to come and give an address on the subject, an address which was listened to with the greatest attention and pleasure, while both the address and the discussion on it were reported at length in the Surveyors' admirable journal. Really it was a model institution, and when he mentioned the name of Mr. Leslie Wood, who was connected with it, he was sure they would drink his health with the greatest enthusiasm. (Applause.) He looked upon Mr. Leslie Wood as the conscience of this Society. (Laughter.) They had plenty of intellect, and plenty of physical energy, but what they had always wanted was a strong conscience. (Laughter.) They could, however, be perfectly certain that while Mr. Leslie Wood was with them they would not indulge in reckless extravagance. These were only chaffing words, but, seriously, everyone was pleased when he heard the clear accents with which Mr. Leslie Wood addressed them, and everyone of them at the last meeting of the Surveyors' Institution was delighted with the splendid address which he gave on "Forestry." What he had said about the land-agents was true about the surveyors, and he was sure that no one had taken a greater share in enlisting the interest of the younger members of the Surveyors' Institution in forestry than had Mr. Leslie Wood. (Applause.) He gave the health of the four Societies, coupled with the names of the gentlemen he had mentioned. (Applause.)

Mr. GILLANDERS said he was proud to have the honour of responding to the toast of the Scottish Society, because he believed he was the only individual in that room who could claim the distinction of belonging to the Councils of both Societies.

(Hear, hear.) He was asked to respond for the Scottish Society only, but he hoped he should be giving no offence if he coupled with it the Highland Agricultural Society, which did all it could to co-operate with the Scottish Arboricultural Society. He was proud to belong to the Highland Society in a double capacity; he was not only a member of it, he had the honour for the last two years of being its examiner in practical forestry, and he hoped that many of the younger members of this Society would come forward and secure the diploma which the Highland Agricultural Society awarded. The Royal Scottish was the oldest of the Arboricultural Societies, and it was watching with considerable interest the growth of the Royal English Society. He was proud of the fact that the time had come when the Royal English Arboricultural Society would grow more rapidly than the Scottish Society. It must necessarily be so. The English Society had a larger field to grow from; there were more landowners, more estates, more agents, more forests, and also more agricultural colleges in England than in Scotland, and it was therefore obvious that the time must soon come when the Royal English Aboricultural Society would outgrow the Scottish Society. When that time came there was no organisation that would more heartily congratulate the Royal English Arboricultural Society than would the Royal Scottish Arboricultural Society. (Hear, hear.) The work of both Societies was practically identical. They did what they could to promote the interests of forestry, and in this respect he might mention that, having regard to the introduction of the Land Bill for Scotland by the Government, they devoted much time in considering the Bill, and forwarded a petition to the Government suggesting that it was necessary to include afforestation in any scheme of land reform for Scotland. That the Government regarded their action as of some importance was evident from the fact that they had the honour of receiving a letter in reply, stating that their petition had been duly received and that it would receive every attention. (Laughter.) The Scottish Society was also doing all it could to advance original research. Some time ago they appointed a Committee to inquire into larch disease, and he had the honour to belong to it. (Hear, hear.) They started with high hopes and aspirations, and they were assured that they would make an original discovery. And so they did—they discovered that they could find out nothing further about it. (Laughter.) The interests of the Scottish and of the English Societies were practically identical, as also were their methods, and one of the most influential meetings they had held was that organised by Dr. Somerville, when they made a tour in northern Germany. He (the speaker) believed that that meeting had done more good than any meeting hitherto held. He trusted that through the medium of the Scottish Society they would always be able to train men in such a manner that, when they did cross the border—and the ambition of many seemed to lie in that direction, while there seemed little or no ambition to return—(laughter)—they would come well-equipped for their duties and well-trained in character, so that they might be able to give ample satisfaction to their employers and gain the esteem and co-operation of the agents with whom they would have to work. (Hear, hear.) Though perhaps this was not the time to speak of his forthcoming book, still, if there was any gentleman present—(loud laughter, and a voice: "No advertisement"). He was afraid they misunderstood him. He was going to say that if there was any gentleman present whom he had not asked to subscribe —(Oh)—he hoped they would accept his humblest and sincerest apologies. (Laughter and cheers.)

Mr. Henry remarked that he could hardly talk without laughing, for the very humorous speeches they had just listened to should have come from men who had kissed the Blarney Stone, and not from the supposed dry Scotchman and the reputed sombre Englishman, epithets which were really false. He found it very difficult to follow the speeches of Mr. Fisher and Mr. Gillanders, but on the present occasion he might say that no injustice had been done to Ireland. (Hear, hear.) It was very seldom that Irishmen were in the habit of speaking in that strain. They were, of course, always finding that there were things which ought to be mended. But he might tell them that his own interest in forestry began really from the idea that was gradually forcing itself into the minds of Irishmen, after a long and baneful period of politics, that perhaps they would succeed better if they would try and do something for themselves rather than look to the Government. (Hear, hear.) They had all heard of the laudable and curious phrase, "Sinn Fein." That meant, "Ourselves alone," and the party, which had that for its motto, while it dealt with politics, yet he was glad to say had also this idea, that the Irish people should be taught that progress could be achieved only by their own individual efforts, by industry, by science, and by knowledge. During the past few years the progress made had been enormous. They had all heard of Sir Horace Plunkett, and they were all very sorry to lose him. He (the speaker) heard that it had even been advocated that Sir Horace should go to Scotland in order to settle the burning land question there. His (Mr. Henry's) own interest in forestry began after he returned from China, through this idea, that in Ireland there was a very large quantity of waste land, and that the afforestation of these enormous tracts of waste land might be a feasible and a practical policy to carry out. That had not been accomplished yet, but perhaps it would be brought about later on. He must say that the Irish Forestry Society, to which he belonged and on whose behalf he tendered his most hearty thanks for the manner in which the toast had been drunk, was very small in numbers, and though very poor in resources as compared with some other organisations, was doing its best to create an interest in forestry. At present forestry was not a subject of absorbing interest in Ireland, but he had no doubt the time would come when it would make great advances. They had in Ireland a mild climate and a heavy rainfall, and the other day, when he made a trip through the country with Professor Sargent, from Boston, they found at Wicklow, Waterford, Cork, and Kerry, examples of the most wonderful growth of trees imaginable. Not only were they capable of growing in Ireland all the ordinary trees that were to be seen in England, but there were many exotics flourishing there, of very fine timber. It was very remarkable the height and girth and volume of wood to which such trees attained in Ireland.

They were fortunate also in having larch trees which were practically free from disease. One of the most pleasant things that the Irish people—who were all abroad, or at least the great majority were—found was, the really hearty welcome that they received, first of all from the English people. (Hear, hear.) An Irishman was always apparently at home in England. It was here that he received courtesy and hospitality and real friendship. That, at all events, was his own feeling and experience. When the Irish Society had been linked up with the English Society he regarded the act as a real union, and he hoped it would be the beginning of many similar unions. (Hear, hear.) His trouble with the English people was that they did not really know Ireland. They did not visit it very often—they were perhaps afraid of getting wet, and perhaps they did not like the flavour of the native liquor so well as that of the Scotch variety. (Laughter.) But the Irish were really not so peculiar or remarkable a people as they were made out to be. He thought, judging from the progress that had been made by the peasant, who had now become the proprietor, or was now on the way to become one, that during the past ten years the progress had really been remarkable, and he looked forward to the Irish peasant being just as industrious and prosperous as the French peasant. Bridger Young, who travelled in France before the revolution, gave it as his opinion that the condition of the French peasant was so miserable and his habits so lazy, and the state of agriculture so bad, that he could conceive of no revolution, however great, and no amount of capital being brought in, which would raise France to the position that England at that time occupied. But they all knew what the French peasant had become a hundred years after the revolution, and he looked forward to a similar change occurring in Ireland. This could be brought about by the people looking after themselves, by relying upon their own efforts, and by taking advantage of the science, knowledge and skill, that the opportunities of co-operation offered to them. He thanked the President, who was his great friend, and Mr. Fisher for the kind things said of him. We Irish people (he added) do appreciate kindness, and we do love a kindly word. (Applause.)

Mr. COWPER COLES, responding on behalf of the Land Agents' Society, said they would not expect much from him, especially after the excellent and witty speeches which had been sandwiched between the proposer's toast and his response. On behalf of the land-agents he thanked them most sincerely for recognising them as a kindred society. They were a young society, but he was glad to say strong in membership, and they were recognised not only by kindred societies such as this, but by the Board of Agriculture and the Government. He did not know any society which was more closely associated in purpose with the Royal English Arboricultural Society. This was his first visit as a member of their Society, and he must say that both for the social enjoyment and for the instruction he had gained that day, he was deeply grateful for having had the chance of attending the outing. (Hear, hear.) He was sorry, looking through the list of those attending the meeting, to see how poorly Monmouthshire and Wales were represented. They were close to the borders of Wales, where a great deal of work was going on, useful work in forestry by landowners and their agents for the prosperity of the country, and he was glad to see that great strides were being made in this matter; but he was sorry to see there were such a few Welsh members of this Society. He hoped only that this visit to Gloucestershire, which no doubt would be reported in the Welsh papers, would result in more members being enrolled from Wales. He further hoped that the day would come when Wales might have the pleasure of welcoming the Society into its midst, and that he should have the honour of helping to entertain them. (Hear, hear). There was only one delusion about Wales to which he should like to refer. Mr. Fisher had spoken about the waste lands of Scotland. He (the speaker) did not know how or under what laws the waste lands of Scotland were held, but if Mr. Fisher had mentioned the waste lands of Wales he (the speaker) should have at once thought that he was aspiring to a seat in Parliament, or that he did not know the conditions under which land was held in the Principality. There was no greater delusion than to imagine there were really waste lands in Wales.

Perhaps no political statement had been made which was more likely to lead to confusion than the idea that the waste lands of Wales could be planted as forests. The waste lands of Wales belonged to the lords-of-the-manor, who possessed the manorial rights, but their rights were subject to the more important rights of the commoners to graze on the land. Therefore, before those hills could be planted with forests, the rights-of-common would have to be purchased, which was impossible unless the landowners chose to do it. No doubt the landowners had plenty of land that they could plant, and land which was suitable for planting, but the afforestation of the waste lands of Wales was not a subject within the range of practical politics. (Applause.)

Mr. Leslie Wood remarked that after the kind words of Mr. Fisher and the eulogium of the Surveyors' Institution by the President, they would quite understand that he appreciated the honour of being allowed to reply to the toast on behalf of that Institution. He thanked them on behalf of quite a goodly number of members present for the honour they had done that organisation by including it in the toast of kindred societies. The Surveyors' Institution had really two purposes in life. One was, of course, more or less a selfish purpose, a sort of freemasonry amongst themselves, just to help themselves—a very laudable object. The second purpose was that by educational means and methods they should help on the interests not only of themselves individually, but of those for whom they acted. He was happy to say that the Royal English Arboricultural Society benefited from both of those two purposes. In the first place, the Society benefited by the gathering together of a group of men—he was happy to say many of them the younger men of the Society—who would gradually shape more and more this Society for the benefit of forestry and for the benefit of those for whom forestry was carried on. He thought it was very largely through the young land agents, who would influence also the landowners, that the future of forestry would be assured. (Hear, hear.) In the second place, he believed that the great educational purpose which the Surveyors' Institution always had in view had benefited this Society also. They would be glad to know that not only had forestry been recognised amongst the examinations of the Institution for some years, but that it had now been arranged to include the subject in the syllabus for the intermediate examination. They were holding also every three years a special examination in forestry, for which the number of men that competed was increasing rapidly. He was happy to say that they had amongst their number that night men who had qualified for every examination and who had taken the prizes offered by the Institution. In addition, the effect of the education which had been given by the Institution was being seen in the work that was being done by them this year. Three of the essays written this time, including that which secured for the writer the gold medal of the Royal English Arboricultural Society, were written by men who had been members of the Surveyors' Institution. Further, the Institution possessed a museum, and the Council had recently effected further improvements for the better development of that museum upon lines that would be of benefit to the students who wished to qualify in any subject. He remembered that many years ago, when he first went out with this Society, the members of the Institution, who were also members of this Society, numbered three only. Last year they numbered twenty. This year he was not quite sure exactly how many there were, but he knew of seventeen, and it was possible there were one or two more. He was happy to say that that night they had also in Mr. Cowper Coles, who had just spoken, one of the Council of the Surveyors' Institution. They could quite understand, therefore, that the ties between the Surveyors' Institution and the Royal English Arboricultural Society were such that they might hope would be strengthened year by year, and that they would soon have more men coming to these meetings who would co-operate with them in their work. (Applause.)

The toast-list concluded, the PRESIDENT vacated the chair, and the pleasant gathering broke up.

SUMMER MEETING, 1908.

The annual summer meeting was held in August last, in Denmark. This is the third occasion on which visits have been made to continental woods; France in 1902 and Belgium in 1905. As the visit to Denmark was restricted to a party not exceeding 50, the original intention of the Council was to hold a meeting simultaneously in Ireland. Owing, however, to various reasons—not the least important being that Ireland should be reserved for a summer meeting when there could be a full attendance of members — the Irish meeting was cancelled at the last moment. This necessitated an alteration in the place for the Annual General Meeting, originally fixed for Birmingham, and London was agreed upon.

The members who took part in the Danish meeting were:

Charles P. Ackers, Huntley Manor, Gloucester.
Lieut.-Col. P. Burges, The Ridge, Chipping Sodbury.
George Cooper, Cemetery Superintendent, Gateshead.
W. Davidson, Presville, Kent Road, Harrogate.
Edward Davidson, Haydon Bridge, Northumberland (Sec.)
Cyril H. Donne, The Abbey Ruins, Bury St. Edmunds.
M. C. Duchesne, Wellington Lodge, Slough.
H. J. Elwes, F.R.S., Colesborne, Cheltenham (President).

A. C. Forbes, Avondale, Rathdrum, Ireland.
L. Fosbrooke, Ravenstone Hall, Ashby de la Zouch.
Francis R. Glover, Three Oaks, Lathom, Nr. Ormskirk.
James Gornall, Eccleston Park, Prescott.

John Graham, Findon Cottage, near Durham.
Robert Gray, Sherborne, North Leach, Glos.
L. H. Gullachsen, 10, Pilgrim Street, Newcastle.
J. J. Harle, Tortworth Estate Office, Falfield, Glos.
Dr. Augustine Henry, 37, Chesterton Road, Cambridge.
Major A. W. Hicks-Beach, Mancetter House, Atherstone.
Frank Hull, Lilleshall, Newport, Shropshire.
John A. Irving, West Fell, Corbridge.
Sir John Keane, Golden Farm, Cirencester.

E. R. Pratt, Ryston Hall, Downham, Norfolk.
Morgan Philips Price, Tibberton Court, Gloucester.
W. R. Price, Pen Moel, Chepstow.
Lancelot J. C. Riley, Putley Court, Ledbury.
G. M. Ryan, 17, Langney Road, Eastbourne.
W. V. K. Stenning, Halsford, East Grinstead.
J. E. Hellyar Stooke, Palace Yard, Hereford.
Professor Fraser Storey, The Glen, Innerleithen, N.B.
Dr. W. Somerville, 121, Banbury Road, Oxford.
N. Temperley, Low Fell, Gateshead.
Capt. Walker, Crawfordton, Thornhill, N.B.
James W. Watt, Knowefield, Carlisle.
M. L. Wheldon, 17, St. Mary's, York.
Leslie S. Wood, East Grinstead.

In the current issue of the Quarterly Journal of Forestry a full report will be found of the meeting in Denmark.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

The 27th Annual General Meeting of the Society was held in the Liverpool Street Hotel (Middlesex Room), on Saturday, August 8th, 1908, at 3 o'clock, the President, Mr H. J. Elwes, F.R.S., in the chair.

In addition to the members going to Denmark the following were present:—

Oxley Durant Parker, Sharpham, Devon.
Charles Richardson, Stamford.
R. F. Woodcock, Haslemere.
Wm. Michie, Welbeck, Worksop.
Wm. Elder, Ollerton.
Wm. Storie, Newbury.
George Gallie, Sledmere, York.
W. A. Forster, Pulford.
R. G. Forbes, Tavistock.
C. Hankins, Bury St. Edmunds.
W. A. Herd, Penrith.
Ireton Jones, Delganny Nurseries, Wicklow.
W. H. Morter, Birmingham.
Theo. Martin, London.
C. Smith, junr., Hathersage, near Sheffield.
E. Terry, Stowmarket.

Minutes.

In order to effect a saving of time the minutes of the last annual general meeting (printed in Transactions Vol. VII., Pt. I., Page I.) were taken as read.

Report of Membership.

The Secretary (Mr Edward Davidson) submitted the following report of Membership.

Total Members at commencement of year — August, 1907		920
During the year there have been
Deaths	8
Lapses	5
Resignation	17	30
		890
Elected during the year at Council Meetings		141
Total		1031

The President said that was more than double what the membership was in 1901, and that the new members were—many of them landowners and land agents—in a position, by their influence, to be of great assistance to the Society. There were, he said, at least another 1000 eligible who only needed a little persuasion to come into the Society.

The report was approved.

Financial Statement.

The Secretary next submitted the statement of accounts for the year a copy of which will be found on page 81

On the motion of Mr C. Hankins, seconded by Sir Hugh Beevor, Bart., the financial statement was accepted.

Election of Officers.

President.

The President said that two years ago Sir Hugh Beevor would have been President, but was prevented by family reasons from taking office. When the Council considered the question again, he (Sir Hugh), expressed himself willing to serve and he accordingly had great pleasure in proposing him. It needed no words of his to tell them how much Sir Hugh Beevor had done for the Society as one of their most active and useful members who had the interest of the Society at heart. They could not find a better man. (Cheers.)

Mr George Marshall, seconding, said they could not have a keener President or one who had the Society's interest more thoroughly at heart than Sir Hugh Beevor. (Cheers.)

The proposal was carried with acclamation.

Sir Hugh Beevor, responding, said he would do all that lay in his power, but he felt he had a very difficult task in following a man like Mr Elwes, who had been all over the United Kingdom in his motor car, always with the Society as his first thought. (Hear, hear.) He thanked them for the honour they had done him in electing him as their President.

Vice-Presidents.

On the motion of Mr George Cooper seconded by Mr C. Hankins, the two retiring Vice-Presidents, Mr J. W. Robson, Hexham (a founder of the Society), and Mr Wm. Forbes, Blairgowrie, were re-elected.

A vacancy having been caused by the lamented death of Mr B. Cowan, Dr Augustine Henry, Reader in Forestry, Cambridge, was unanimously elected on the proposal of Mr E. R. Pratt, seconded by Professor Fraser Storey.

Members of Council.

The following members of Council retiring by rotation were re-elected:—

Mr George Ross, Hexham.
Mr T. Bewick, Raby Castle, Staindrop.
Mr Leslie Wood, F.S.I., East Grinstead.
Professor Potter, Armstrong College, Newcastle.
Mr D. Hamilton, Knowsley, Prescot.

Auditors.

On the motion of Mr John Graham, seconded by Captain Davidson the following were elected Auditors:—

Mr Alderman Clough, Gateshead.
Mr George Cooper, Gateshead.

Local Secretaries.

Considerable discussion took place on the question of the election of local secretaries, many members expressing the view that local secretaries should be appointed in every county, and that the duties pertaining to the office should not be overlooked, as had been the case in the majority of instances in the past.

It was ultimately agreed on the motion of Mr Robert Gray, seconded by Mr Theo. Martin, F.S.I., to ask each county to elect its own local Secretary, and in the event of any county not taking action, the Council to make an election.

Judges of Essays.

Mr G. Marshall moved and Mr N. Temperley seconded that the Judges of Essays, viz. Mr A. C. Forbes, Dr A. Henry and Mr J. P. Robertson be re-elected. Carried unanimously.

Forestry Examiners.

The following were re-elected Examiners in Forestry:—

Principal J. Smith Hill, Aspatria.
Mr Wm. Forbes, Blairgowrie.
Mr W. B. Havelock, Brocklesby.

Judges' Report on Essays.

Only one essay was sent in for competition and the Judges recommended an award of the Society's silver medal, which was confirmed by the general meeting. The writer was Mr B. W. Adkin, 82, Victoria Street, Westminster, the subject being "Butterflies and larger moths affecting Forestry in Great Britain."

Next Year's Tour.

Some discussion took place with reference to the Summer Meeting of 1909.

The President suggested Herefordshire, Monmouthshire and the Border generally.

Mr A. J. Mann moved Ireland. This was seconded by Captain Davidson.

Mr Charles Hankins said that practical foresters were not able to afford such expensive trips as Denmark one year and Ireland the next. It would be better to let Ireland alone for a year or two if they desired to have the practical foresters present.

Mr A. C. Forbes said that the Society would be welcomed in Ireland. He had done a good deal of preparatory work for the visit, and had told his Irish friends that the proposal to go over there had only been postponed.

It was finally agreed to leave the question to the Council with the suggestion that Ireland should be deferred until 1910.

A vote of thanks to the President concluded the meeting.

The members dined together in the Hotel at six o'clock, and left at seven for Harwich en route for Denmark.

At a Council meeting held at York, on November 9th, 1908, the following new members were elected:—

ANNUAL MEMBERS.

Black, Geo., jun., G. Black & Sons, Tweedmouth Boiler Works, Berwick-on-Tweed.

The Royal English Arboricultural Society.

SUMMER MEETING AT SHREWSBURY, 1909.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Royal English Arboricultural Society was held at the George Hotel, Shrewsbury, on Tuesday, August 3rd, 1909, the President, Sir Hugh R. Beevor, Bart., in the chair. There was a large attendance of members.

The Secretary (Mr Edward Davidson) stated that the total membership at the commencement of the year was 1,031. During the year they had elected 117 new members, but there had been 10 deaths, 17 resignations, and 28 members had lapsed, leaving a net increase on the year of 62, or a total membership at the present moment of 1,093. (Hear, hear.)

The President said he thought that would lead to a gratifying financial statement, which he now called for.

The Secretary submitted the financial statement, particulars of which will be found on pages 151-152.

The President said he thought they might congratulate the secretary upon the balance sheet. There was one item he would like to call attention to. That was the amount of £5/16/6 for county meetings. That was a small item, but he thought it ought not to appear again in their accounts. He thought it should be arranged that if there was a county meeting the expense should be borne locally.

The Secretary said that item covered many meetings, and he was asked by the various secretaries up and down the country as to what was to be done. He had had no instructions from the Council, and the amounts were so small that he thought for the first year at any rate he might pay the initial expense. (Hear, hear.) He thought in future county secretaries might be able to make some arrangements with their own members. It really amounted to just the cost of the room.

The President said he was saying it ought not to appear again for the simple reason that it would be an expenditure over which their secretary could not possibly have any control. Probably they would be able to issue some sort of guide to county secretaries later on and they would tell them they might subscribe the small cost of their meetings, because they did not expect the county secretary to put his hand in his pocket for the purpose.

Mr J. J. Harle, Tortworth, remarked that in the Land Agents Society there was a small branch subscription which covered any small expense of that sort.

Mr Duchesne, Slough, said he really did not think that matter was worth wasting time over. (Hear, hear.) The secretary had paid the expenditure, as was only right and proper, and he took it that Mr Davidson would now intimate to the local secretaries that they were not to come down upon the Society for such expenses. He had been looking at last year's balance-sheet in the Transactions, and he saw the printing of the Journal of Forestry was £224/11/1, against which they had subscriptions of £34/2/0, advertisements £28/17/10, sale of Journals to non-members £28/17/10, leaving a loss to the Society of £132, which meant about two-thirds of the whole of the annual subscriptions, and he thought that was a thing that called for some comment. He would also like to know what was the rule with regard to Oxford and Cambridge, because he believed it was an absolute rule that no "puff" should be given in the publication unless there was an advertisement paid for, and the only advertisement that he could find there was from Cirencester, which be believed never had a "puff." (Laughter.) He would have thought that Oxford alone, being a wealthy University, would have paid for advertisements. He thought more than one member out of four should pay towards the upkeep of the Journal, so that it should not require nearly one-half of the subscriptions to run it. He hoped everyone would take his remarks in the spirit they were made. Let them take the Journal: he thought they might say that nearly 90 per cent. of the members were interested in estate and not in State forestry, but if they took up the last Journal they found 30 pages taken up with the Lancashire local meeting and was particularly given to Oxford and State forestry.

The President: I think as a matter of order you should keep yourself to the financial statement.

Mr Duchesne said it was only to illustrate his point. Although 90 per cent. of the members were interested in estate forestry 90 per cent. of the Journal was given up to State forestry.

The President said it was a question of finance.

Mr Duchesne said the result was that only one member in four paid towards the Journal, and there was also the question of advertisements. Could not they get someone to run the Journal who was interested in estate forestry?

The President said if Mr Duchesne pleased they would not discuss the Journal, which was what its members made it — (hear, hear)—and if they heard a great deal of Oxford and Cambridge it was because they readily contributed articles which other members did not—(hear, hear.) They were discussing the financial question.

The Secretary said he might give one or two statements regarding the figures as affecting the Journal. The total cost for the year now ending was £227, and against that they had advertisements £63 this year, sales of Journals £35, which was an income of £98, which reduced the cost of the Journal to £129. The "Transactions" before the Journal was printed always cost them practically £100 a year, so that really the Journal had only cost them £29, and against that they must put the fact that they had been increasing their membership recently at a very rapid rate, and he personally believed it was entirely due, or to a very large extent, to the Forestry Journal. (Hear, hear.)

Prof. Fisher, Oxford (Editor), said he did not know of any "puffs" either about Oxford University or Cambridge. There were certain reports of what had been done in forestry instruction there, and he supposed that society was interested in knowing what was done in forestry instruction. If any other college or school of forestry liked to send him reports such as he got from Dr Henry and Sir William Schlich he would be delighted to publish them.

Mr G. Ross, Hexham, proposed the adoption of the report and accounts. He thought it was highly satisfactory, including that part which dealt with the publication of the Journal. The little expense they had been put to would, he had no doubt, be made up to them in the very great increase of members, and influential members, they had had since the Journal was published. (Hear, hear.)

Mr R. McGibbon, Wentworth, seconded.

Dr Henry said Mr Duchesne had made a point that the Journal was not satisfactory to a certain number of the members. That was a point with all of them, and he thought instead of burking it they really ought to take it into consideration and ask Mr Duchesne to suggest some practical method of making the Journal more interesting. They all wanted to make the Journal more interesting to everybody. Mr Duchesne was interested in a special branch of forestry, and he might make a practical suggestion for carrying out his views. He for one would support anything in that direction. Evidently the feeling was that they did not get enough contributions from practical foresters. (Hear, hear.) That might be because they were too much engrossed with their duties or for other reasons, and through the president he asked to be enlightened in what way Mr Duchesne, if he were entrusted with the editorship of the Journal, would bring the thing into force.

It was moved that the motion be put.

The President said he might state that the financial part of the Journal had not been without the attention of the Council. On two occasions had the matter been before the Finance Committee, and they were still considering points connected with the accounts.

The motion being then put was carried nem. con.

THE COUNCIL'S REPORT.

The Secretary then read the following report for the past year:—

"Your Council have had four meetings during the year: At York, Oxford, Gloucester and Shrewsbury.

In addition to important matters of a routine character such as the proposed alteration to the Rules affecting the constitution of the Council, the appointment of County Secretaries, etc., your Council have had under consideration several questions having a vital bearing upon the future welfare of the woodlands of this country, and the past year has been one in which useful aggressive work has been done.

In connection with the subject of "Extraordinary Traffic" in English Timber, your Society have endeavoured to further the interests of the Timber Trade Federation of the United Kingdom with reference to a pending appeal upon an important claim arising in Wales. A short summary of the judgment of Mr Justice Walton was drawn up and published in the "Forestry Journal" for the information of the members. Several members of the Society, who are owners of woodlands, also became contributors to the Special Guarantee Fund.

In June last a British Timber Conference was held in London under the joint auspices of the English Timber Federation and the Royal English Arboricultural Society under the Presidency of Sir E. Stafford Howard.

Papers were read by —

Mr Charles Hopton, on " Railway Rates for Native as compared with Foreign Timber."

By Mr Ernest Charles, on " Extraordinary Traffic and Excessive Weight."

By Mr Leslie Wood, on " Rating and Taxation of Woodlands."

By Mr Murray Marshall, on " The best means of encouraging the consumption of Native Timber."

A full report of the Conference, including the discussion, is being printed, and will be forwarded to every member of the Society.

Arising out of the Conference a Committee was appointed by your Society to deal with the question of the Rating and Taxation of Woodlands, which met at the Surveyors' Institute under the presidency of Sir Hugh R. Beevor. It was resolved to bring the question of the general practice of Assessment Committees in dealing with the assessment of Woodlands before the Local Government Board and to ask the President of the Board to receive a deputation on the subject. The questions of Income Tax and Death Duties were also fully considered—the latter in view of the Finance Bill. In due course the findings of the Committee will be laid before the members.

A considerable quantity of information on the Rating of Woodlands has been gathered from members of the Society by means of a set of printed questions. The replies are being tabulated by Mr Cyril H. Donne (to whom this Society is greatly indebted) and will be printed in the Journal.

The Forestry Exhibition held in connection with the Royal Agricultural Society still continues to prove a successful addition to the Show, and thanks are due to Mr George Marshall for his untiring efforts on behalf of this Section. A Plantation Competition was introduced this year at the suggestion of Mr Elwes, and this has proved to be an outstanding feature. To Mr Elwes the Royal Agricultural Society and the Royal English Arboricultural Society are also indebted for having been responsible for raising the Special Prize Fund in this Class.

It is a matter of regret that the Competition for the Society's Medals awarded for original essays has not of late years been very great, and the Council will be glad if an improvement can be made in future years.

The " Forestry Journal " continues to fill a long-felt want, and the Society's thanks are due to Professor Fisher for the labour bestowed upon it. Financially, as you will have seen from the report, it shows a great improvement, the receipts for the Sales and Advertisements being an increase of £40 over last year."

The report was accepted.

THE PLANTATION COMPETITION.

Mr Elwes asked whether the meeting would like him to say anything on the Plantation Competition.

The President said the Council had passed a vote of thanks to Mr Elwes for his labours in that matter, which had been so appreciated in the Press and elsewhere.

Mr Elwes, Cheltenham, said he felt much obliged to the Council for the vote of thanks. With regard to the competition he was astounded at the remarkable way in which a new idea was accepted by such a very conservative body as the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society, without whom he could not have carried the thing out. He thought all who knew what had been done, and who had read the very able report of Mr Leslie Wood and Mr Havelock, would agree with him that in the words of a friend of his which were printed in the "Times" that plantation competition, if it was made permanent, as he hoped and had every reason to believe it would be, would do more for the advancement of estate forestry than all the reports of all the Royal Commissions that had ever sat on the subject. (Hear, hear.) That might be an exaggerated opinion, but it was one held by a man who knew a great deal more about it than many of them did. He must say the landlords of Gloucester had come forward in the most liberal manner to find the funds necessary, and he was able with the assent of the Council to get the assistance of two judges, than whom he thought they would agree with him two better judges could not be found in England, and those who had read the report he was sure would agree with him in saying that that Society owed a debt to them for the prompt way in which they took it up and for the way in which they were able to get the whole of the judging done before the show—(hear, hear)—so that the prizes could be declared on the day of the show, and to get their report printed in such a short time afterwards. That report must be of great assistance to everybody, and he hoped the Council of that Society and all the members would do their very best in influencing the Agricultural Society as far as possible to make that permanent. There was one other matter which he thought he ought to mention, and that was with regard to the judging of the exhibit of forestry, which he thought was admitted to be the best exhibit of British forestry products ever seen in England. (Hear, hear.) Hitherto no regular judges had been appointed as far as he knew, but the Council of the R.A.S.E. had kindly asked him to do what he could, and they had got a practical judge in the shape of Mr Workman, and a scientific judge in the shape of Dr Henry, and he was sure if the report they got from them was as good as that of Mr Havelock and Mr Leslie Wood they would be just as much indebted to them as to the others. He ventured to suggest to the Society that they could spend their money much more advantageously in that way than by offering prizes for essays which very often only lead to a rechauffe of things they all knew very well. (Laughter, and hear, hear.)

The President said he would like to ask Mr Elwes what arrangements were made about the gold medals.

Mr Elwes said he thought the arrangement made with the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society of England was that they were to give their gold medal. They stuck out hard against that. They said it was only given for very special things, and he pointed out that such an exhibit as that made by Lord Yarborough two years ago and last year, and that made by Lord Dudley this year, or at any rate by his forester, was at least as worthy of a medal as any bull that ever had been shown or ever would be shown, and took a great deal more time and trouble to produce. (Laughter and hear, hear.) Then he said if they were giving a gold medal was it to go to the plantation or the best exhibit? He thought the gold medal of the Royal was given for the best exhibit, and that it was their Society's medal for the best plantation, but Mr Rogers of Stanage who was chairman of the committee, said he believed it was the other way round. Anyhow he (Mr Elwes) pledged the Society's credit to the extent of promising a gold medal, and he said if the Society would not stand by him he would pay for it himself. (Hear, hear.)

Mr E. R. Pratt, Downham, asked to be allowed on behalf of that meeting to thank Mr Elwes for the proposition he had made. (Hear, hear.) When they came to think over the matter for a moment they would see that the people they wanted to bring into their fold and to get to take an interest in that subject were first of all the men who had the money and the land. He thought Mr Elwes had said, and it was certainly the case that if there was that competition in a certain district the landowners found it out and would compete, and when they had a chance of getting a gold medal they would begin to take an interest in that important subject. Therefore he thought that not only should the Society endorse the resolution of the Council which proposed he thought that there should be a gold medal, but that that particular Society should itself give a gold medal apart from the R.A.S.E., and he hoped that would be an annual competition without any doubt whatever, and that the meeting would endorse that so that the matter would be settled for ever. (Hear, hear.)

Mr Elwes added that Sir Richard Cooper, an active member of the Royal said they were just as pleased as the Arboricultural Society were and they would take it to Liverpool this year, and although that was not a great planting district, if they could carry it on through two years they could look upon it as a permanent thing. Anyhow they ought to do their best to make it a permanent thing. (Hear, hear.)

ALTERATION OF RULES.

Notice had been given that the President would move:

1. That Rule X be altered to read " The affairs of the Society shall be conducted by a Council consisting of the President and 24 Councillors, two of whom shall be Associate Members. The President and Six Councillors at the bottom of the list (three of whom shall not be eligible for re-election until the lapse of one year), shall retire annually."

2. New Rule (XI.) The President shall be empowered to appoint a member of the Council to act as his deputy during his term of office. In the event of no such appointment being made by the President, the Deputy President shall be elected by the Council at their first meeting.

3. New Rule (XII.) Vice-Presidents, not exceeding 24 in number, who shall retire annually, may be appointed by the Council from among the members of the Society.

4. Bye-Law I. To read " At any meeting of the Society or Council the chair shall be taken by the President, and in his absence the Deputy President for the time being. In the event of neither being available, the Chairman shall be appointed by the meeting from among the members of the Council."

5. That Rule XI and Bye-Law IV be suspended for one year to facilitate above new legislation.

6. That power be obtained from the Annual General Meeting for the Council to elect the first new Council from its own existing members.

Mr Elwes asked how many members of the Society did the two associate members represent on the Council.

The President said that was fully discussed at the Council meeting on the previous night. There was a good deal of history attached to it and the members were not agreed, and the opinion expressed by the Council generally was that in the course of evolution that Society had been undergoing, a very rapid evolution, the Society in all probability would before many years were out make no differentiation of the members. Members would be members. (Hear, hear.)

Mr Elwes: Then we may look upon this as only a temporary arrangement?

The President: Probably so. I mean to say that was the general opinion.

Mr Elwes said he would like to ask had it always been the practice that the president should retire annually, because his impression was that the President had always been appointed for two years.

The President said the president had always been appointed annually according to law, but he had been re-elected.

Mr Elwes said if that was so there was no reason why they should not elect a president several years in succession. There was nothing in the rules to prevent that.

The President said he supposed not. It was a custom which he thought the Society would very soon have to reconsider. When they had 1,000 members it was a question whether they should not extend their sphere of influence by changing the president oftener.

The President proposed, Mr McGibbon seconded, and it was resolved, that the first resolution be adopted.

Resolution No. 2 also was adopted, on the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr G. Cooper, Gateshead.

With regard to Resolution No. 3, Mr Elwes said he noticed that "may" had been substituted for "shall." He asked was that done advisedly. Did it mean that it would be left to the Council whether they appointed six or 24, because "may" left the thing entirely optional with them as to how many they appointed?

The President said he thought "may" was meant in the sense that it was an honour which it was sometimes very useful to confer when they wanted to pay a compliment to some one who had done useful service to the Society. Therefore they might not want to have them filled up at once.

Mr Elwes said he would like to have the President's own views as to the advisability of appointing so many as 24.

The President said there was no necessity to at all.

Mr Elwes said this was a recommendation put forward for the Society to adopt. It was the only occasion of discussing it, and he merely asked whether the President considered as representing the Council that there was a desire to have so many, or was it a number which had been put down?

The President said a large number might be more desirable immediately than later on, when they diminished their government so greatly as their new rules would do. There were a certain number of men who had worked well that the Council might desire to have as vice-presidents.

Mr W. V. K. Stenning, East Grinstead, asked if the vice-presidents had any responsibility?

The President said they were not to be ex-officio members of h e Council.

Mr Stenning said he really did not see the use of appointing them in those circumstances. If they reduced the number to four or six and made them ex-officio members he could see a reason.

Mr G. Ross, Hexham, seconded the adoption of the resolution, which was carried.

The President moved the adoption of No. 4. Mr W. Davidson, Harrogate seconded and this was agreed to.

The President moved and Mr W. Herd, Penrith, seconded the adoption of No. 5. The motion was carried.

It was proposed by the President and seconded by Mr McGibbon that No. 6 be carried.

Mr Elwes asked whether the resolution really put it out of the power to nominate any new members of the Council.

The President said it was impossible to have any new members this year apparently.

The motion was carried.

Mr George Marshall, Godalming, asked whether it was not advisable to say something about the gentlemen who had the honour of being past presidents of the Society? Would they have any position of any sort? The rules did not even say that they might stand for election.

A member pointed out that every member of the Council, including Past Presidents would stand for re-election.

The President said the present Council, which contained all the past presidents, elected the new Council, and they might if they chose elect all their past presidents. There really might be no reason why the rule should be altered, because there was no doubt the Society would like to look back and see that they had such past presidents as the Right Hon. Lord Avebury, the Earl of Durham, and so on. They liked to know that they were associated with men of mark, and he supposed the list of past presidents would remain as heretofore.

Mr Marshall said his point was this, although they made special mention of what was going to happen to the vice-presidents they made no mention of what was going to happen to the past presidents. He wanted them to make a rule that the past presidents would be eligible for election on the Council.

A member: They are; there is no necessity to state it.

Mr H. J. Marshall, Ross, asked whether the Council was always elected by the Council or by the members?

The President said always by the members, but they had suspended their bye-laws for that one year.

The matter then dropped.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mr Elwes said he was sure after the able manner in which the President had filled the chair in the past year they should certainly re-elect him. (Hear, hear and applause.) He was sure they must all feel that considering what he had gone through last year they ought to feel the greatest debt to their president for all he had done for them. He was sure they all agreed with him that they could not find a better president. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

Mr H. J. Marshall seconded, and the motion was carried with acclamation.

The President said he was very much obliged to them for the honour they had done him in electing him to be president for the coming year, and he would be quite willing to act. He hoped he would be able to attend to the work of the Society, but as he was saying before perhaps he ought to set an example. He did think that very likely in the future he would differ with Mr Elwes, and consider whether it would not be good policy for them to have their presidents changed annually, because they wanted to keep things circulating. But still there was a great deal doing just now, and in the course of the present Budget he thought he would be rather sorry to leave the chair. (Hear, hear.)

Mr Ross proposed, Mr G. Marshall seconded, and it was resolved that Ald. Clough and Mr George Cooper be re-elected auditors.

Mr A. C. Forbes, Dr A. Henry, and Mr J. P. Robertson were re-elected judges of essays, on the proposition of Capt. Davidson, seconded by Mr McGibbon.

Ald. Wardill, Gateshead, moved, Mr Leslie Wood, East Grinstead, seconded, and it was resolved, that Mr William Forbes, Mr W. B. Havelock, and Principal J. Smith Hill be re-appointed forestry examiners.

REPORT ON ESSAYS.

The Secretary read the report of the Judges upon the following essays—1. Theory and practice in British Forestry by "Sylvis." 2. Do., by "Gradatim."

The report, awarding a silver medal to No. 2, was confirmed. The Secretary announced that the writer of the successful essay was Mr A. Murray, forester, Kingswood, Murthly.

THE NEXT SUMMER MEETING.

The President said the resolution read out in the minutes was that they decided last year by a small majority of 18 to 15 that this year they should be spending their time in Ireland, but the Council as a matter of practical consideration had arranged as they saw. He believed Mr Irish wanted to make some suggestions.

Mr Irish invited the Society to visit Earl Poulett's Hinton St. George Estate, Crewkerne, and said he was certain the Society would have a most interesting excursion, and nothing would be left undone to make the gathering a great success.

The President said he was sure the meeting thought it was very kind indeed of Lord Poulett to invite the Society there, but he thought it was too late to come to a decision that night.

Ireland was suggested as the place of meeting and considerable discussion arose thereupon. Ultimately it was arranged that the meeting should be in Ireland if possible.

THE POSITION OF THE ARBORETUM.

Mr George Marshall said he wished to bring forward the position of their arboretum. As they knew that arboretum was composed of 145 different sorts of conifers, presented to the Society by the late Hon. Mark Rolle. The Society did not quite know what to do with them, and Mr Fisher kindly came forward and took that collection to Cooper's Hill, where he was then living, and tended it carefully, and eventually when he left for Oxford the arboretum was taken with him. Mr Elwes and Mr Herd had added to the collection, and it was now in a very flourishing state, but the reason it was in a flourishing state was really no credit to the Society, because they had not contributed a single farthing to the expenditure. The whole expenditure had been contributed by Magdalen College, Oxford, or nearly all, and Mr Elwes, Professor Fisher, Mr Cooper, and himself were on the committee, in conjunction with the Bursar of Magdalen College, Mr Baker, and now their difficulty was that Mr Baker, who had always taken the keenest interest in it was retiring, and another difficulty was that when they had attended these meetings they had always been asked by the authorities there if the Society could not see their way to contribute something towards the upkeep of the arboretum. He wished to move that a sum of money—he thought £15 would not hurt the Society—be contributed annually to the upkeep of that arboretum. He would point out that the arboretum was open for inspection at any time by any single member of the Society, and he had no doubt there was a great deal to be learned out of it.

Mr Elwes seconded the motion.

Prof. Fisher said there was a small nursery attached to the place and the sale of the plants was credited to the arboretum. He thought there had generally been a balance over on the sale of the plants of about £15 or £20, but the sale of the plants was not quite enough to pay expenses. Magdalen College had given them grants and he thought it was a question whether after Mr Baker they would have a man who would support the place as well as he had done. He (the speaker) thought that in order to give the Society a little hold on the place they ought to make some pecuniary grant towards its maintenance.

Mr Cooper said he had been through the arboretum. It was the only place in England where the Society had a collection of plants, and he thought it well deserved their support.

Mr W. Davidson thought the question ought to go to the Finance Committee.

Mr Leslie Wood asked whether Oxford made use of the arboretum at all, because the Society did not make use of it, and he very much doubted whether they had the collection.

The President said he thought the position was quite impossible from the business point of view; if they put their trees upon another man's land that always made it impossible. But it was a valuable collection, and one that had done and was still doing service to the Society. He thought while the finances allowed they might very well from year to year make a grant.

Mr Marshall added to his motion that the grant be made "subject to the approval of the Finance Committee."

Mr W. Davidson moved that the whole matter be left to the Finance Committee and the Council.

Mr N. Temperley, Gateshead, said to see such a large number of conifers growing was an object lesson to the whole country, and he thought the Society should support the experiment by an annual grant.

It was agreed that the question should go to the Finance Committee.

On the motion of Mr A. J. Forrest, Windsor, seconded by Mr Leslie Wood a vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman, and this ended the meeting.

THE DINNER.

The annual dinner was held at the George Hotel on Wednesday evening, August 4th, 1909, when the President was supported by Major A. H. O. Lloyd, M.V.O., Leaton Knolls, Mr Aug. H. Ashdown (agent to Lord Barnard), Mr L. Dease (Shrewsbury), Mr R. Woodward, junr., Arley Castle, etc.

The President gave the toast of the King, which was duly honoured.

Mr Pratt gave the health of the gentlemen who had been good enough to have the Society on their estates during the week—the Earl of Powis, the Earl of Bradford, Lord Forester, Mr Naylor, Mr

Woodward, and Major Arthur Lloyd. In the name of the Society he wished those gentlemen long life, and also the gentlemen who managed their estates the pleasure in future years and for many years of watching, managing, and improving the beautiful estates and magnificent trees the members had seen and were to see. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

Major Lloyd said he felt more of a guest than a host, for he was one of those who had had the pleasure of going round that day and seeing those glorious woods, those wonderful examples of arboriculture and sylviculture on Lord Powis's estate at Walcot. (Hear, hear, and applause.) The landowners of the county to whom that Society was indebted were really Lord Powis, Lord Bradford, Lord Forester and Mr Naylor. On their behalf he returned thanks for the honour the Society had paid them, for it certainly was an honour to have gentlemen of such distinction to visit their estates. They, proud Salopians, were especially proud of their beautiful county, which owed so much to its woodlands, and in that connection they must remember and acknowledge how much they owed to their ancestors. (Hear, hear.) In breeding stock a man saw the result of his labours, but in tree growing the fruits were reaped by succeeding generations. A good stock of timber was a most valuable asset to an estate, not only for the landlord but also directly to the tenant. (Hear, hear.) His estate was a small one compared with others the Society had visited, but it was suggested that the place was worth a visit, and with the other gentlemen whose names had been mentioned he considered a real compliment had been paid him. (Applause.) In his opinion the Society was doing a most excellent work, and he hoped to become a member of it. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

Mr Woodward also replied.

Mr Ashdown proposed "Success to the Royal English Arboricultural Society." He said he was sure Lord Barnard would wish him to say how sorry he was that none of his woods were so situated that in visiting other parts of Shropshire they could give his estates a call. (Hear, hear.) In coupling the toast with the name of the President, he said he was certain that as long as it had men at its head like Sir Hugh Beevor the success of the Society would be assured, and also the pleasure of those meetings.

The toast was drunk with musical honours.

The President said he agreed with Major Lloyd that Salopians should be proud of their county. The Society, perhaps did not know they were coming to a county which so abounded in large and well-managed forests. And he might say they were also coming to a county which had developed its forestry; in the last 16 years or so some 4,000 acres of woodland had been added to Shropshire. It was with great regret they would leave a county where there was so much to see that they must leave unseen. (Hear, hear.) There would be room to come and visit that county again if opportunity offered within a very few years. He read that long ago at Pitchford Hall just outside Shrewsbury there was an old lime tree with a house in it, which said something for the age of lime trees, and they knew that just over the border they had seen the finest oaks which probably it would be their fortune to see, and also the tallest Douglas which in all probability it had been their pleasure to see. It was of great interest to find that one of the functions which the Society was gradually handing over to other societies—the educational aspect —was being locally developed and encouraged. There was the Harper-Adams College, which was paying close attention to forestry in the course of its education, and Lord Powis not only interested himself in his own woods and their development but was so good as to interest himself in the education of others in allowing access to his woods by the students of the College. (Hear, hear.) There was no fear for the future of forestry in Shropshire when education in forestry was fostered and watched and assisted in that way. (Hear, hear, and applause.) He might add a few words of self-congratulation to the Society for some of its development. He thought the Society might congratulate itself that plantations like farms were coming in for competition in connection with the Royal Agricultural Society. (Hear, hear.)

Mr H. J. Marshall, Gayton Hall, proposed the health of the Secretary, and said he had never attended the meeting of any society where the excursions had been so thoroughly well organised. (Hear, hear, and applause.) The amount of foresight, tact, and discretion shown by Mr Davidson was almost beyond belief. (Hear, hear.) The toast received musical honours.

Mr Davidson said he thought in connection with that meeting the main credit was due to Mr Fraser Storey, who had had most of the detailed arrangements to work out. So far as he personally was concerned it was always a very great pleasure to do anything for the Society. He had known it many years, when its membership was very small, and he had watched its progress with very great interest. If any part of that was due to anything he had done he was very glad. (Applause.)

Mr L. H. Gullachsen, Newcastle, proposed "Success to the town of Shrewsbury" to which Mr L. Dease suitably replied in a happy speech.

Mr H. Hinde, Haydon Bridge, having given a recitation, other toasts followed, after which the proceedings terminated.

The Royal English Arboricultural Society.

ANNUAL MEETING, 1910.

The Annual General Meeting was held in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, on the evening of Monday, August 15th. Mr H. J. Elwes, F.R.S. (Deputy President), presided.

The Minutes of the last Annual Meeting having been already published in the Transactions, were taken as read.

Mr Edward Davidson (Secretary and Treasurer) read the Financial Statement for the year. (For Statement see pages 227-228.)

The Chairman: I think we ought to congratulate Mr Davidson upon his very clear statement of the financial position of the Society, which, I think, is very favourable. I don't remember any more favourable, or even such a favourable statement. Some years ago we were in many ways in a very bad state, but the progress of the Society, and the introduction of new members, has put all that out of sight. (Hear, hear.) But I should like to see the funds of the Society larger than they are now, for there are a great many branches of the work of the Society which are crippled for want of funds. We want the membership of men of the best class as well as their subscriptions. We want quality as much as quantity. There are still many owners of large forests who are unaware of the existence of the Society. I hope the members will beat up and get others to join. (Hear, hear).

Mr M. C. Duchesne, F.S.I., said that he would like to raise one or two points with reference to the "Journal." They would remember that he had made some remarks on this point last year, but that he was ruled out of order before he could say what he intended. Had he been allowed to continue there were two things which he certainly should not have omitted. The first was their great indebtedness to Professor Fisher for giving up the time; in fact, one of the points which he intended to make was that it was not fair to leave everything to Professor Fisher. He also would not have sat down before making suggestions as to how the "Journal" could be improved, both as to matter and also finance. He would not take up their time with remarks as to the "Journal" itself, but he was glad to see that there were more articles bearing on Estate Forestry. He was continually being asked for the names and addresses of firms who supplied various forestry requisites, and he thought it would be a great boon to the gentlemen interested in forestry operations if there was a recognised medium where the names of firms supplying these things could be found. There were various publications at the present time where a few advertisements of this description were inserted, but it necessitated a great deal of time and trouble to hunt up the name and address of any particular firm. He suggested that they should make the "Journal of Forestry a complete recognised medium for all advertisements connected with forestry. There was not time to explain all the necessary steps to carry out the suggestion, but he should like to confer with the Secretary and Messrs Laughtons with a view to carrying it into practice. Although the articles on Estate Forestry were now more numerous in the "Journal," he should like to see them increased, especially those from practical foresters. He should be very pleased to give a sum not exceeding £5 5s during the next year for articles bearing on Estate Forestry, and so that they might be of the description he desired, he should like to be allowed to announce the subject and also judge the papers.

The Chairman: I should like to hear the views of other members with regard to the "Journal." I know that Mr Fisher has given a great deal of time and trouble to it, entirely without remuneration. But for him I dont know how the "Journal" could be carried on. He says he does not get papers unless he asks for them; and that he has very great trouble in getting a sufficient number of them. Quality we should have. Having so much to do as he has he cannot be held responsible for the appearance of the "Journal" at a fixed date. I see no reason why anyone who is willing to take part in it should not do so. We should be very glad of the help. The time is coming, and may be very soon, when he may be no longer in Oxford. The trouble is that there has never been a great many men who can give the time, and take the pains to write papers. I don't think that in the case of a "Journal" such as ours we ought to pay for papers unless it is found to be absolutely necessary. In some cases, however, it might be desirable to pay for papers, but if once they admitted the principle they would find a difficulty in withdrawing from it. There were a great many who are able to send short notes on matters of interest; and short notes, if they were written by men who wrote what they saw and knew themselves, would be very advantageous to the Society. He thought they had only to make known to the members generally that these short notes would be of value—especially notes of local doings—to secure them and the result would be that they would get a considerable addition to their list of members.

Mr J. Smith Hill asked, with reference to the item of £16 2s 10d in the financial statement for County Meetings, what that amount represented. He understood that the sum of £1 was allowed to each County if applied for towards local expenses. Had there been seventeen meetings?

The Secretary said the amount included between £9 and £10 incurred by one County alone before the limit was established. The Finance Committee had considered the circumstances and decided that it ought to be paid. That charge would not occur again.

Mr J. J. Harle moved, and Mr W. Groome seconded the adoption of the financial statement, and the motion was carried unanimously.

YEARLY REPORT.

The Secretary then read the report of the Council as follows:—

MEMBERSHIP.—At the last Annual Meeting the total membership was 1,093. During the year there have been elected 106 new members. Against this there has to be deducted:

Resignations	19
Deaths	17
Lapses	48
	84

This leaves a net increase on the year of 22, making the total membership at the present time 1115. I regret to have to report such a large number of lapses, but such a step has been necessary in the interests of the Society, and though there is not a large net increase on the year just ended, it is satisfactory to know that the members now on the books are all actively interested in the Society.

MEETINGS.—Your Council has held four meetings during the year:—One at York, two at London, and one at Liverpool, and the following is a summary of the principal matters that have been dealt with.

RATING OF WOODLANDS.—The Sub-Committee which was appointed as one result of the joint conference between the Timber Trade Federation and your Society, have continued their deliberations on this question, and through their influence the Local Government Board have issued to all Union Assessment Committees a circular on the Rating Act of 1874. Assessment Committees have hitherto failed to properly appreciate and act upon the Rating Act, 1874, in regard to the assessment of woodlands, and it is hoped that the circular referred to, which has been printed in the Journal, may be the means of bringing about some adjustment in the Assessments.

RURAL EDUCATION CONFERENCE.—Your Society was invited by the President of the Board of Education and the President of the Board of Agriculture to appoint two representatives to attend a conference on Rural Education, and your Council appointed Mr Elwes and Professor Fisher to act in this capacity. The matter is at present only in its initial stages.

INCOME TAX ON WOODS.—A further sub-committee has been appointed to seek an interview with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the question of Income Tax on Woods under the Finance Act, 1909. The Chancellor has asked for a memorandum on the subject which the Committee wish to bring before his notice, and this has been duly prepared and forwarded.

DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1909.—A special meeting of your Council was held in London to consider the claims of Forestry under this Act, and a number of resolutions were carefully drafted and forwarded to the Commissioners. These resolutions have appeared in the public press, and will also be printed in the Journal. It is hoped that an Advisory Committee on Forestry will be appointed as provided in the Act, and that your Society will be represented thereon.

ENTOMOLOGY CONGRESS.—The Society has been represented at the Entomology Congress recently held in Brussels by Mr A. T. Gillanders, who will write a special report for the Forestry Journal.

GOLD MEDAL.—The Society's gold medal has been awarded to Mr A. T. Gillanders for his published work on Forest Entomology.

FORESTRY JOURNAL.—The Forestry Journal continues to be a valuable asset to the Society, and the revenue from advertisements is steadily on the increase. A slight decrease in the sales will be noticed, but this is only temporary, and is attributable to a new arrangement with the Irish Forestry Society for the supply of their copies. In each of the next four issues an article will appear on "Home Forestry," written by four leading practical foresters. Thanks have again to be recorded to Professor Fisher for his great labour in connection with the Editorship.

FORESTRY EXHIBITION AND PLANTATION COMPETITION.—Your Society continues to organise the Exhibition for the Royal Agricultural Society, and this year the gold medal given by this Society for the best plantation has been awarded to Colonel Sandbach. A local committee has been appointed to make preliminary arrangements for the next Exhibition at Norwich.

COUNTY SECRETARIES.—County Secretaries are now appointed over nearly the whole of England and some very successful County Meetings have been held during the year. Many of the new members elected during the past year have been secured through this agency, and as these meetings become more established a still further increase will inevitably result.

The Chairman said that, in the absence of Mr Fisher, he should like to refer briefly to the Rural Education Conference. There were about thirty representatives present, representing all the various bodies in England who are supposed to have an interest in the question. Among them was Mr C. Bathurst, one of their most useful advocates in Parliament. Mr Bathurst agreed with him that the question of education in its relation to forestry in England was a matter which could not be separated from the work of the Development Commission; but this view was not assented to by the Education Department, and at present the deliberations of the sub-committee, of which he had been made a member, had been confined to subjects outside the work of the Society. He did not, however despair of being able to exercise some influence in the work in which they were interested, and would report progress at the next Council meeting.

Mr A. C. Forbes: What is the meaning of the following in the Council's resolutions on the subject of the Development Act so far as forestry is concerned?:—"The purchase and planting of land found after enquiry to be suitable for afforestation should be postponed until after the result of such enquiries and experiments have been made known to the Commissioners."

The Chairman: We discussed that very fully at the last meeting of the Council; and he thought he might say that the opinion of the members was unanimous that there were a great many points connected with forestry on which further investigation was necessary before anything was done in the way of afforestation. They were practically unanimous that they ought to begin in this way rather than on the lines in the report of the recent Forestry Commission.

Mr Forbes: Then re-afforestation is standing still?

The Chairman: It is not standing still. Experimental work was being carried on by the Professors of the Royal Agricultural College at Cirencester on his own land, and by Dr. Henry and Mr Burdon at Cambridge and elsewhere on college and private property, and if the Development Commissioners could be got to realise how much money would be eventually saved by such work as the resolutions advocated, he had no doubt they would assist any teaching institutions, which were properly qualified to do a great deal of necessary and valuable experiments on different soils, in different parts of England. The Council had not thought it necessary to consider the requirements of Scotland and Ireland in their resolutions, because it did not come within their province.

Mr Forbes: I am not speaking in that view. It seems to me that something more might be done than enquiry.

The Chairman: He was sorry that Mr Forbes was not at the Council meeting. These recommendations were got up at short notice, but were not final, and if any member would suggest any change he would be glad to embody it. A thousand pounds spent on an enquiry such as this would be much better spent, and would be of much more value, than if spent in planting without proper knowledge.

On the motion of Sir John Keane, seconded by Mr Cooper, the report was adopted.

Election of President.

Dr. Henry, in moving the election of Mr E. R. Pratt as President of the Society for the ensuing year, referred to Mr Pratt's high position in Norfolk. If everyone would take a practical part in the work in his own district they would get on very well. Mr Pratt had been an assiduous worker; and he (Dr. Henry) believed he would make an excellent President.

Mr George Marshall seconded the motion, which was carried amid applause.

Mr Pratt suitably replied.

Vice-Presidents.

The Chairman said the next matter on the agenda paper was the election of vice-presidents. He said that formerly they had a large number of vice-presidents, but they were now working under different rules. The question was were they to have one or more vice-presidents. That was a question to be decided by the Society. The actual appointment of vice-presidents was left to the Council; but the nomination was in the hands of the Society, and the Council would be glad to know what the wishes of the Council were.

Sir John Keane suggested the nomination of two or three.

The Chairman said that in the other Societies he belonged to there were two or three vice-presidents. He really did not know why they were reduced to one in this case.

Sir John Keane said that the President had power to appoint a deputy when he could not attend.

Mr E. R. Pratt: I think there is no occasion for having vice-presidents as an ornament, but I will second Sir John Keane so that the question can be discussed and voted upon.

The Chairman: I think it would be desirable that someone should move a resolution on the subject. The Council might or might not act upon it.

Sir John Keane moved and Mr Pratt seconded, that it be a recommendation to the Council to appoint three vice-presidents.

Captain Davidson said that the new rules disposed of all the past presidents and vice-presidents. The thing was already provided for in the rules—surely they were not going to change about so quickly. Their rules were not yet quite two years old; and he suggested that they should stand for a while. They were fortunately so situated that all the recent past presidents were all at this time members of the Council, and as long as they were in the Council it would be a mistake not to ask one of them to take senior position. The president could always, as Sir Hugh Beevor had done, ask a member of the Council to act as his deputy.

Sir John Keane said he was quite willing to withdraw the motion if that was the wish of the meeting.

The resolution was then put and negatived by a large majority.

Mr Pratt moved, and Captain Davidson seconded the nomination of M. Daubre as a distinguished service member; this was agreed to.

Members of Council.

The following members were re-elected to seats on the Council:—Sir Hugh R. Beevor, Bart., Professor Fraser Storey, Mr N. Temperley.

The following were elected under the new rule:—Mr M. C. Duchesne, F.S.I., Sir John Keane, Mr C. C. Rogers

Auditors.

The Auditors, Messrs W. Clough and George Cooper, were re-elected.

COUNTY SECRETARIES.

The Secretary stated that secretaries should be appointed for the Counties of Nottingham, Staffordshire, Bedfordshire, Huntingdonshire, Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall.

The Chairman said it was most important that secretaries should be appointed for those counties, and he would be glad if anyone would suggest suitable persons.

This matter was referred to the Council.

JUDGES OF ESSAYS.

The following were re-appointed:—Dr. Augustine Henry, Mr A. C. Forbes, Mr W. B. Havelock.

FORESTRY EXAMINERS

The following were re-appointed:—Principal J. Smith Hill, B.A., Mr Wm. Forbes, Mr W. B. Havelock.

THE NEXT ANNUAL MEETING.

Mr Duchesne suggested that the Annual Summer Meeting next year be held in London, and he would undertake to draw up a preliminary programme for submission to the Council.

Mr Pratt thought that since afforestation was coming it would be desirable to make themselves acquainted more thoroughly than at present with the system of forestry in foreign countries. He thought a trip to France would be a great benefit to them, and if London is adopted for 1911, he would strongly urge France for 1912.

The subject was referred to the Council.

VOTES OF THANKS.

Mr Harle moved a vote of thanks to the County Secretaries for the great work they had done. He felt that they had been the great cause of all the increase in the number of members.

Captain Davidson seconded the motion, which was adopted.

The Chairman moved a vote of thanks to the retiring President, Sir Hugh Beevor. Sir Hugh was giving up his London life and was going to live in the country. He was now on a trip to America; and he (the Chairman) had no doubt that on his return he would be able to give them a most interesting account of his visit to the American forests, in a paper for the Journal. (Applause.)

A cordial vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman, and the meeting separated.

THE ANNUAL DINNER.

The Annual Dinner was held in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, on Wednesday evening, 17th August, Mr H. J. Elwes presiding. A number of invited guests were present, including the Hon. T. W. Russell (Vice-President, Department of Agriculture), Sir John Keane, Mr James Black, Mr A. E. Morean, Mr Charles Grey, Mr A. C. Forbes, Mr H. O. Braddell, Mr C. Dawson, and others.

The toast of "The King," proposed by the Chairman, having been duly honoured,

Mr H. L. Fife gave the toast of "The Proprietors of Estates we have visited and are invited to visit." He said the toast was one that required no words of his to recommend it to their acceptance, which he was certain would be most enthusiastic. He thought there was no one present who would not agree with him as to the great kindness with which they had been received by the Proprietors of the Estates they had visited during the preceding few days. They had had the opportunity of seeing some very beautiful sights, and they had seen a good deal of native timber. He felt assured that the members of the Society realised that their hearty thanks were due to the gentlemen who had received them so kindly, and that those thanks would be cordially given. He coupled with the toast the name of Sir John Keane. (Applause.)

Sir John Keane, who, on rising, was received with applause, said he thanked them, on behalf of the owners of estates which they had visited, or were about to visit, and also on his own behalf, for the kind words used by Mr Fife in proposing the toast. It was a very great pleasure to them in Ireland to see the Society and its distinguished members in this country; and they could only hope that their visitors would carry back with them pleasant recollections of their tour. He thought they should rather be thanking their visitors, because a privilege they were conferring. By the visit to our properties they in Ireland got sound advice and able criticism, for which they paid nothing. He might say, every possible degree of professional and scientific advice. Some of us may think, for example, that we have a unique specimen, and in your presence we are apt to be disillusioned. Some of us may think that we have a swan when in reality it is only a goose. On the other hand, it was pleasant to be told that what you may have thought was only a goose was really a swan. He had been complimented by one of their visitors on having an exceedingly fine cedar. It was a great compliment to be paid by one who is so well able to judge. He (Sir John Keane) hoped that this visit would also stimulate interest among themselves in this country, and in other countries in the subject of forestry. Time was when his knowledge of trees was to know broad-leaved trees to be beech, oak, or ash, and all the rest were firs. (Laughter.) He did not suppose that his position was exceptional in that. He met a friend the other day who was well blessed with this world's goods; and they got talking about rubber trees; and it came out that his friend was under the impression that rubber was a fruit. (Laughter.) So they could only hope that the visit of a society like that would be of great educational value. In Ireland the question was of the greatest importance. A short time ago a tenant, on purchasing his holding under the Land Act, first skinned the place of trees. He said to a tenant on an adjoining estate, "I cut down all the timber; and what do you think I got for it—I got £40." That man was paying £2 or £3 a year as rent to the Government; and by this wanton act he realised what would pay 15 or 20 years' instalments. It was only in such a way as this visit that good ideas were discovered—when the members of this Society came and saw what we have to show them—it is not very much, but we do our best. (Applause).

Principal J. Smith-Hill, B.A., in proposing the toast of "The Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland," said it was one of considerable magnitude, and one to which he was unable to give adequate treatment. At all events he wished to pay an honest tribute of admiration for the work which had been accomplished during the last ten years by the Department; and also during the last five years—especially in the matter of forestry by the Right Hon. gentleman whose name was down to reply to the toast. He (Mr Smith-Hill) 15 years ago endeavoured to learn something in connection with that object. At that time the only institution in connection with it was the Albert Model Farm, which, under Mr Carroll, was doing good work as far as was possible before the passing of the Agricultural Act of 1899, which altered the state of affairs so that in 10 years they were able to see what had resulted from the beginning of instruction, none at all of which existed then. The use of the spraying mixture for the prevention of potato blight was begun 15 or 16 years ago by Professor Carroll. That was a work of considerable magnitude, and, no doubt, of considerable benefit to Ireland. There was now a network, both of institutions and of instructors throughout Ireland, by which the development and regeneration of the country was being accomplished, and the accomplishment of which would need the co-operation of the men for whose benefit it was being done. He thought that in England they were beginning to see some good results from the Report of the Recess Committee—that inspiring document, which, he believed, was embodied in the Act of Parliament under which this department has been formed. Although large sums of money had been spent for the benefit of agriculture in Ireland, they in England saw some of the results. From his own personal knowledge, and from what he had been told by people who knew much better than he did, the results were shown in the improvement in the quality of the stock which was sent over from Ireland; he saw that in his own county of Cumberland. They also saw it in the high quality, and the increased quantity of the butter which came over from the Creameries in Ireland to England. He knew it was the wish of their honoured guest that Ireland should capture a much larger share of the butter trade. The object of their Society was the development of forestry; and in this respect the Royal English Arboricultural Society would find they had a good friend in the Vice-president of the Department. (Hear, hear). It was one of his first public duties to form a Forestry Commission. On that Commission he invited a past president of their Society, Professor Fisher, to act, in 1907. They had to thank the Vice-president for the opportunity of their visit to that historic place, Avondale, now converted into a Forestry Station, at the head of which was Mr Arthur Cole Forbes; and they were pleased to think that there was a link between the Department and the Royal English Arboricultural Society, by it having furnished an expert to Ireland. He was sure that every one who went to Avondale was astonished at the work he must have got through during the four years Mr Forbes had been in this country, and pleased that the work had been done by one of their members. Perhaps, however, they had only lent Mr Forbes to Ireland; and that when the schemes that were now in embryo had reached maturity, Mr Forbes might again be claimed for England. The toast was associated with the name of the Vice-president, whose presence was an indication of the great good-will which he has to the object which the Society has at heart; and if the members would glance through the Report of the Commission which Mr Russell had appointed they would see what he would like to have in a short time—that 200,000 acres would in a short time be afforested; and that there was over a million acres to be afforested by the Department of which he is the head. (Applause).

The Right Honourable T. W. Russell, in responding, said he was very much obliged to them for drinking his health, and for their good wishes for the Department which he that night officially represented. It was probably the largest State Department in Ireland; its ramifications were enormous, and the subjects it dealt with could only be described as astonishing. It was sometimes favoured with kindly criticism, and sometimes with criticism of an entirely different character. They were both welcome, and he was sure they did their best to profit by both. That night they had to deal with a branch of the work as to which there was no difference of opinion. His friend who had proposed the toast said that forestry was the first subject that he (Mr Russell) had touched effectively on coming into office. He was appointed in May; the commission commenced it sittings in August. They lost no time, nor did they lose any time in reporting, for in six months the Report was produced. The Commission was started for the purpose of shelving the matter. That was sometimes the case. (Laughter). He had no idea that it should be shelved, and he determined that it should not be shelved.

The Report having been produced, it was received with the greatest favour. Let them see where they were to-day. The first thing they had done was to put a stop to the cutting down of trees to which Sir John Keane had referred. It had transformed the country, and had rendered the work of the Department possible. (Hear, hear). There had been some drawbacks. Some of the tenants, looking only to immediate cash results, cut down the trees and sold them to Scotch Timber merchants. But it was not the tenants who had purchased their holdings alone who did so. Needy landlords—there were such gentlemen in Ireland—(laughter)—at all events there were some of those gentlemen who, desiring to get cash, had, in many instances, before they sold their property, denuded it of timber. By the Act of 1909 tenants were prohibited from cutting timber without the permission of the Department. It was a big responsibility, and it was suggested that it might be used to hold it "in terrorem" over the tenants. But at all events they would do their best. It was nonsense allowing the trees to be cut down as they were cut down in the past, merely to turn them into cash. Another step of importance was taken. Before the Act was passed, in the case of landlords not selling to the tenants direct, but to the Land Commission, the Land Commission bought the estate, and if there were woodlands on it these were retained by the landlords with the object of selling the timber to the Scotch timber merchants. He was not going to say a word against Scotsmen—he was a Scotsman himself—but they had a very keen sense; and these needy landlords, wishing to sell their own estates, included in the agreement a clause giving them the option of selling the woodlands to the Scotch merchants. In this way some of the most beautiful estates in Ireland had been ruthlessly denuded of timber. The Treasury treated him so helpfully that he must say a good word for it. He was told, of course, to wait; that the subject was under consideration; and that if they did it for Ireland they would have to do it for England and Scotland. He told them that there were things going on in Ireland that were not going on in England or Scotland; that the Irish timber was being cut under their own Acts of Parliament; and he asked them to give some money to prevent this cutting down of timber by the Scotch timber merchants, and the Treasury had for the past two years given the sum of £6,000 each year for this purpose. Now, when the Land Commission buy an estate from the Land Court—if there are woodlands on the estate they come to the Department first, and give it the option of buying. The Department buys it, and becomes trustee for the nation, and out of this £6,000 it pays the annual instalments just as the tenants pay their annual instalments. The Department step in, buy the timber, get the property, and the cost to the nation was nothing. It was a tentative work; but it was not all that the country wants—not what the nation wants. They had made rather a bold bid for the future. They had asked straight out for £100,000 to be expended during the next five years in purchasing suitable land and planting suitable timber. He had no doubt that work would be begun. Mr Forbes would have some of it; and he would require assistants. They were not going to let them have Mr Forbes back again. If they wanted men they would have to raid some other hen-roost. He had heard men say: "We have no option now, if we want good men we have to come to Ireland." The New Zealand Government recently took away one of our best agriculturists, after ransacking England and Scotland. Well, they had got the power to buy the land; and they had got the power to plant. Not only had the Department the power; but the District Councils had the power. They were better organised in Ireland than they in England were. They were doing extremely well. They had several places in Dundrum (County Tipperary), several in Camolin (County Wexford), and some in Galway. He might allude to one or two other things in which those present had some interest—it would show what they were doing. They were taking great interest in the growth of tobacco. They had got to the point of producing tobacco. There was going to be no question about it. The climate is suitable; the soil is suitable; the whole thing has been mastered. They were not doing it at a profit. That was only a question of time, and the work was one that gave a great deal of labour. With regard to the spraying of potatoes, he said that if the Department had done nothing but that it would be entitled to be deeply thanked. This year there were fifty-five men in the West of Ireland fighting the blight—taking charge of the whole place; seeing that it was done at the right time. And the potatoes in the West of Ireland are safer than they are in some parts of the Midlands. (Hear, hear). The Department some years ago thought in some parts of the South of Ireland where the climate was suitable an attempt should be made to grow early potatoes. Twenty-five years ago he went to see the Ponsonby estate in County Cork, to report concerning it for a great English newspaper. The tenants were nearly all in jail; the land was under the Plan of Campaign; nothing could be more desolate, more miserable. The other day he found that place simply a garden. He found them growing potatoes for the Glasgow market, and getting them into the Glasgow market ten days before the Ayrshires. And what price were they getting for them? £30 an acre. And the moment they were out of the ground there was a catch-crop going in. (Applause.) There they had a new industry. That was the duty of the Department which he represented—it sends men to tell the people how it is to be done. His friends in Parliament used to come to him to ask questions about this Department. Wales and Scotland (Mr Russell said) would probably get a Department; and perhaps England would wake up some day. They in Ireland had a handsome endowment. You put an endowment into education; and you don't know where it is now. But whilst they had a handsome endowment no County in Ireland gets a farthing unless it strikes a rate for the Department. He had been a little more than three years at the head of the Department. It was the finest work that a man could be engaged in. Before that, while he was Parliamentary Secretary of the English Local Government Board, he seldom went home at night without thinking he had done something to relieve distress. Now he was glad to think that he was engaged in doing something to help this country, so long in a backward condition to a condition of prosperity and comfort. (Applause).

Mr J. J. Harle proposed "The Irish Forestry Society," coupled with the name of Mr Charles Dawson. He said that some of the members of the Committee of the Irish Forestry Society were present. He thought that those who had come over with him from England would agree with him that what they had seen, during the last few days, of the work in Ireland was splendid, and, altogether, such as must be a credit to some of the members of the Irish Forestry Society. He thought that some effort might be made for the two societies to come closer together. It struck him that those who are acquainted with the work in Ireland must get a good deal of information which would be useful to the members of the English Society; and notes of that information would be acceptable in the Society's "Journal."

Mr Charles Dawson, in responding, said he rose with very great humility to reply to this toast. He had no knowledge whatever of forestry. How he came to take an interest in the work was in this way. When he was in Parliament a colleague of Dr. Lyons took up the subject as a sort of fad, and he (Mr Dawson) fell in with the fad. They made such an impression on Parliament and upon public opinion in Ireland that the Government sent over an inspector who reported that if there was ever a country suited for afforestation Ireland was; that they could not find a country better suited for that purpose; and that if afforestation was carried out, Ireland, instead of supporting five millions of people, could support twenty-five millions. He (Mr Dawson) never heard one word about it from that day to this. (Laughter). It was, however, proposed by the Recess Committee to take up the work. On one of the great shores of the Bay of Biscay fifty years ago there was a strand and marsh. They planted it with pines. Now it is the richest province in France. (Applause). But there had a period of light and hope come at the last moment, and they could not have better evidence of that than what the Vice-president of the Department had told them. Mr Russell's efforts with the Treasury had been well supplemented by Mr Birrell. (Mr Russell, "Hear, hear.") He (Mr Dawson) in his young days had often wondered who was the Treasury. (Laughter). Unless you have a T. W. Russell, or some thundering fellow to do it, you will never get it. The English afforesters who had come over here were a large and powerful body, with some 1,100 members, while the Irish Forestry Society had only about 100. The English Society had many branches; the Irish Society had none at all. They had much sympathy and much knowledge; the Irish Society had not a farthing's worth. If the Dublin Corporation only knew what effect forestry has on the rates, of which he (Mr Dawson) was collector, they would esteem it highly. In Germany they had taxless towns, because of the income derived from forests. But where would he (Mr Dawson) be if Dublin was taxless? (Laughter). The speaker referred to the great work of re-afforestation that had been done in Nebraska and elsewhere, and concluded by expressing the hope that one result of that meeting would be to make them know each other better. One tree he hoped to plant here and in England—an olive branch which would bring peace under honourable conditions, and friendliness to that nation to which they were indissolubly united. (Applause).

Mr O. H. Braddell, in proposing the toast of "The Royal English Arboricultural Society," said he might be permitted perhaps to quote a line of Moore's song: "Doth not a meeting like this make amends." It was a meeting of Englishmen and Irishmen—indeed it was composed of Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotsmen, and Welshmen, and a member, he believed, from the Scandinavian Peninsular. Mr Dawson said he knew nothing about tree-planting; but he (Mr Braddell) thought Mr Dawson had planted more trees than anyone else in Ireland. At present tillage does not pay, and now was the time to buy land for planting. It would take a generation or a generation and a half to grow trees, and perhaps by that time they would go back to tillage again. He concluded by expressing the hope that the English Society would come again to Ireland.

The Chairman, in responding, said that was the fourth occasion on which he had responded to that toast; but he had never done so with greater difficulty than to-day. He had never heard so much eloquence and so much wit and humour. But he did think that when they saw what wonderful progress had been made by their own Society during the last few years; and when they saw the suitable climate and soil that Ireland possessed, he had great hopes that the visit may not be without result. The Irish Forestry Society had not prospered so well as the English Society; but it should be remembered that in Ireland the owners had had great difficulties to contend with. The financial results of planting in Ireland had not been all that one could wish; but he was delighted to hear that a stop was being put to the reckless cutting of trees. That practice was bad for Ireland, and it was bad for England too—the selling of trees far below their value, competed severely with timber sold in England. He hoped they would see a revival of forestry in Ireland, for which the country was so splendidly fitted. He had been in every part of the world, and he had never seen any country where, he believed, many valuable trees could be grown so well, and so quickly, and so successfully, as in Ireland. (Applause). All that was wanted was to convince the people that a tree is a valuable thing. It seemed to him that when Mr Dawson can get the teachers in every National School to teach the children that the man who plants a tree is spending something that will benefit himself, it would be of great advantage. The ash and larch were two trees which would give a return during life; and these were just the trees that are most suitable for planting in Ireland. (Hear, hear). In America they had destroyed most of the timber in order to grow corn; and now they had to begin replanting trees. For every dollar's worth of timber they sold, they now realised that they had sacrificed ten dollars' worth of national property. When they saw what is being done in America they realised the true situation. A tree is not only one of the greatest ornaments to the landscape, but it was one of the greatest pleasures of old age to see a tree that you planted yourself. When, eight years ago, he began to realise the depth of his own ignorance, and that they were in the position that the farmers were a hundred years ago, he met Dr. Henry, an Irishman, but now a Cambridge teacher, without whom he could not have done so much for the work they were engaged on. In Massachussetts enormous areas of waste land—formerly forest—have been bought back by private individuals, by companies, and by municipalities for the purpose of reconverting it to forests. The present meeting had been one of the most interesting and one of the most instructive meetings they had ever held, and had been remarkable for its hospitality and enjoyment. (Applause).

Mr M. C. Duchesne, F.S.I., proposed the toast of "The Local Secretary" (Mr A. C. Forbes). They had been very glad to see the great work Mr Forbes was doing in Ireland, and he believed that that work was being appreciated. (Applause).

Mr Forbes, in responding, said the difficulty he had experienced was in showing their visitors what was the condition of forestry in Ireland. He should like to have shown them the West of Ireland—a country without trees. Some spots were fairly well wooded, but these were not numerous. They had not an Elwes in Ireland; but they had a Dawson. (Applause). With regard to the places they had seen, they had seen Avondale fifteen years too soon. With regard to the horses they had seen that day, they had come fifteen years too late. He thought Ireland had a good deal to learn. A good deal had been done on private lands, and now that the tenants had got the property they wanted all parties to work together to stir up enthusiasm, and not leave everything to the Government. It was a case of co-operation between the country and the Department. With regard to these excursions to the South of Ireland, Sir John Keane's country, he thought it would be desirable if they saw the state of affairs in the West and in the North; and he would express a wish that the Society should come over some time again and see the North of Ireland. (Applause).

The company then separated.

COMPETITIVE ESSAYS.

Medals, silver and bronze, will be awarded to the writers of the best Essays on ANY SUBJECT CONNECTED WITH FORESTRY.

Class I.: Confined to Assistant Foresters.

Class II.: Open Competition.

Essays to be written on foolscap paper, under a nom de plume: to bear essayist's name and address in a separately sealed envelope, and to be in the hands of the Secretary not later than THE FIRST DAY OF MAY, 1911. The Judges will have discretionary power in deciding whether or not an essay is deserving of an award. When possible, essays should be typewritten.

Any member who may be awarded a Medal shall have it in his option to receive the value in money or plate.

SUMMER MEETING, 1911

The Council has decided to hold the 1911 Summer Meeting in LONDON, from which centre visits will be arranged to many of the finely wooded estates which are within easy reach. Mr M. C. Duchesne, F.S.I., has undertaken the duties of Local Secretary for the meeting. The date is not finally fixed, but will probably be as before, viz.: the second or third week in August.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING, 1911

The thirtieth Annual General Meeting of the Society was held in the Hotel Great Central, London, on Wednesday, August 15th, 1911, at 9 p.m. In the regretted absence of the President, Mr E. R. Pratt, through illness, the proceedings were presided over by Sir Hugh R. Beevor, Bart.

The meeting was attended by a large number of those members taking part in the Annual Excursion, viz., Sir John Keane, The Hon. and Rev. W. C. Ellis, Messrs C. P. Akers, T. H. Atkinson, D. Barclay, F. W. Beadon, W. Beeson, J. Black, J. Brunton, W. H. Bruton, H. J. Bulman, T. W. Burlton, G. Cooper, H. J. Coulston, M. C. Duchesne, T. H. Davies-Colley, E. B. Dawson, H. T. Eking, H. J. Elwes, J. Ferguson, J. W. Ford, L. Fosbrooke, G. Gallie, Wm. Garnett, N. T. Garnett, F. Gleadow, J. Graham, W. E. Groome, L. H. Gullachsen, W. B. Havelock, A. Henry, A. W. Hicks-Beach, J. Irving, W. J. Jefferies, P. O. Laidlaw, T. B. Lennard, T. Lewis, F. W. Markham, G. Marshall, L. H. Marshall, D. McCan, F. McDonald, R. McGibbon, W. McIlwraith, A. McKechnie, G. F. Meynell, C. Miles, E. Moir, D. Munro, A. A. Myles, A. W. Neate, G. R. Nixon, B. J. Petre, J. L. Ramage, P. C. Raffety, C. Richardson, T. Roberts, J. Saunderson, W. Somerville, J. E. H. Stooke, J. Telfer, N. Temperley, T. Thomson, J. H. Waddingham, W. E. Wardill, H. Watkins, C. R. Watson, J. W. Watt, A. Wilcox, J. Wilcox, L. S. Wood, A. Yates, and E. Davidson, Secretary and Treasurer.

Sir Hugh Beevor, in opening the proceedings, expressed regret that he should be compelled to represent their President on this occasion owing to his being detained by illness.

Minutes.

The minutes of the last Annual General Meeting having been already published in the Transactions (Vol. VII., Part IV.) were taken as read, and signed.

President's Address.

Gentlemen,—

I much regret that I am unable to be present with you to-day. It is a great disappointment to me, but my recent illness has not left me sufficient strength to carry out my duties to you to your satisfaction or my own.

Sir Hugh Beevor will, however, well represent me, and read my address to you.

The Society is prospering, the present number of members being 1,213. We shall hope shortly to be of some assistance to the Board of Agriculture in the carrying out of their forestry scheme, and that both collectively and individually. There is undoubtedly a considerable amount of land in large areas that can be obtained and which may be capable of profitable afforestation by an authority, which, I take it, will pay rates only and no taxes, provided that no attempt is made to dabble with the unemployed problem.

We shall not fail in due course to approach the Railway Clearing House as to the assimilation of rates of inland and oversea timber; we shall act with the Scotch Society and have the assistance of the Board of Agriculture. The subject is exceedingly far-reaching and intricate, but since our present rates are computed to represent a tax of five shillings per acre on our woodlands, it is one that we cannot possibly defer or ignore. The excellent suggestion made by Mr Leslie Wood at the recent Timber Conference, of sending out the Local Government Board circular as to assessment of woodlands, has borne good fruit, not in awakening Boards of Guardians to their legal position, but in informing owners of the legal grounds of appeal, and Mr Davidson has had much work in giving information to members in this matter.

The great work of the Council and Society this year, however, and I fear for some years to come, will be the placing before the Government and the public the present deterrent effect of our laws which affect the economic conditions of our private woodlands. The acreage of private woods is now stationary and must remain so until we can see reasonable security in investment in timber. It is somewhat pitiful that the increasing enthusiasm for all forms of sylviculture should be faced with this condition of things, for at present we can make no reliable estimate of future profit, such as is made by any company promoter, for we cannot ascertain the effect of the new death duties, nor can we forsee the end of increased taxation. Your Parliamentary Standing Committee have requested Mr Leslie Wood and Mr M. C. Duchesne to draw up a memorandum as to Death Duties, and we are extremely obliged to them for it, and the Committee will deal with it in due course. The Board of Agriculture Forestry Department have already promised us that their Law Officers shall closely examine any representations we may make to them, and this I hope the Council will find to be one way of procedure.

There are other points that must not be lost sight of. Sir Hugh Beevor's memorandum to the Chancellor of the Exchequer is incontestably true, and the Society should examine and endorse it. It explains the deterrent effect of the Finance Act, 1910, as regards: (1) The increase of Death Duties; (2) The adding the value of woodlands to the aggregate value of the estate for duty purposes; (3) The supertax on larger land-owners.

In June, 1909, Sir Hugh addressed a letter to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and this the Council should also examine and endorse. In 1908, Mr Cyril H. Donne wrote a full explanation of the effect of the taxation on woodlands, as also did Mr Robert Anderson. In February, 1909, an Enquiry Committee was appointed, and a number of useful statements were collated by Mr Donne, and all this information is available for consideration. This work of Sir Hugh Beevor, and the Committee, must not be lost sight of, and forgotten, but collated and reasserted.

I am well aware that it is no easy matter for the Council to advise the Society and the public as to the present economic conditions of private forestry. There is some danger that we may be led to take a too sanguine view of the future of private forestry, and I am inclined to think that we should do no more than improve the condition of our existing woods. We are urged to plant on the ground that English timber will double its present value within a measurable time, and that we may count upon a timber famine. It is not very long since we began to measure our coalfields in view of a possible coal famine, but now all over the world it is being supplanted by oil and water power for many manufacturing purposes. In the same way will ferro-concrete supplant timber in due course, at present the public are in no way awake to its possibilities for general use, at present it is even adding to the demand for timber, but this is not likely to continue.

There is the constant decrease in the cost of ocean freights, and as other Northern forests are opened up, they will make good in part the expected deficiency of our Canadian and Baltic supplies. We may possibly be able to grow pit-props at a profit, if the railways permit, but we shall never be able to compete with the import of wood-pulp.

Sir William Schlich has supplied to the Coast Erosion and Afforestation Commission a statement of the probable profits on State forestry, which may be accepted as authoritative, and I suggest to your Council that they should adopt them and amend them in accordance with the conditions of private forestry, as regards "annual expenses," so as to show the relative economic position of Private as compared with State Forestry

I venture to say that the position of the Society demands that it should speak out plainly on these matters with the authority of its united Council. The Scots Society has expended some of its capital in preparing their Glen Mor afforestation scheme, a report of great value. The statement that I urge you to prepare will also require an expenditure of capital, but I hope that the Society will not grudge a sufficient sum, from their invested funds, to enable this to be carried out without delay.

EDWARD ROGER PRATT,

PRESIDENT.

Sir Hugh Beevor said the first thing they would desire to do was to express their recognition of how thoroughly the President had the work of the Society at heart, and how much he had done for it, despite his illness. Without discussing the address at length, he might mention that only the previous day some of the matters referred to were before the Council of the Society, who had taken further action in the important question of the present mode of the assessment of the Death Duties. A report upon that subject was to be made to the Council by Mr Leslie Wood and Mr M. C. Duchesne. That was what appeared to the Council to be the next step in the process of gathering information for the general report, which it was necessary for the Society to prepare to place before the public upon this subject. He quite agreed with the President when he said that the great work of the Council for the coming year would be placing before the Government and the public, the present deterrent effect of the laws affecting private woodlands. The President, in the address that they had heard read, referred to a large amount of information, which was, he would not say buried, in their Journal, because he thought it was read by members, and which would supply valuable facts on which to form the basis of that report.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The Secretary and Treasurer (Mr Edward Davidson) read the financial statement, particulars of which will be found on Pages 296-7.

The Chairman congratulated the Secretary upon the results of the year's working, and reminded members that it was only a few years since the balance had been of an adverse character, and now there was a credit balance on capital account over and above all their liabilities. They were going to utilise a small part of this, however, to bring their Secretary's salary up to £100 per annum, an increase which they thought he fully deserved, having regard to the extra work they all knew he had undertaken during last year in helping members in connection with the rating of woodlands.

The statement was accepted.

Yearly Report.

The following yearly report was read and adopted:—

Membership.

At the last Annual General Meeting the total membership was 1,115. During the year there have been elected at the Meetings.

Your Council has held 3 meetings during the year, as follows:—

1 at London.
1 at York.
1 at Derby.

The Finance and Publication Committees have also met at the same places prior to the Council Meetings, and an additional Publication Committee meeting was held in London followed by a meeting of the Legislation Committee.

Forestry Journal.

It is with the greatest possible regret that we have to report that since last Annual Meeting the Society has lost by death the invaluable services of the late Mr W. R. Fisher, who acted as Honorary Editor for several years. Through his untiring efforts the position of the Journal was made secure and through his devotion to the work in the early stages of the publication, the success of the Journal was assured. As a member and as an official of the Society we all sincerely regret his loss.

What would have been a difficult matter for the Council in selecting a successor to Mr Fisher was very happily overcome through the magnificent offer of Professor Somerville to undertake the work. The Council highly appreciate the honour of the Editorship of so eminent an authority as Professor Somerville, and tender their best thanks for the time and labour bestowed by him during the past year.

The Publication Committee have arranged for a certain amount of space in each issue to be devoted to correspondence, and undertake to obtain expert answers to questions that may be asked bearing upon Forestry. Members are invited to use the columns of the Journal for this purpose, particularly in cases where the subject upon which information is desired is one that would be of interest to other members of the Society.

Mr T. H. Davies-Colley has also been good enough, through his firm, to answer legal questions which have a direct bearing upon Forestry.

The Committee feel that it would be of great advantage to have reliable records from time to time of Timber Sales in the country, and ask for the co-operation of all those in a position to give the information in making the Journal a medium in this direction. The Secretary will be pleased to give particulars of the form in which such Timber Sale Reports should be furnished.

Forestry Exhibition.

The Society continues to co-operate with the Royal Agricultural Society of England in the Forestry Exhibition, which is an increasing feature of the Royal Show. This year the gold medal offered by this Society for the best plantation has been awarded to Colonel Petre, of Westwich, Norwich. Special mention must be made of the exhibits sent by the President, Mr Pratt, which attracted much attention. His Majesty King George honoured the Exhibition with an official visit.

Rural Education Conference.

Your President, Mr E. R. Pratt, has been appointed a member of the Rural Education Conference in the place of the late Mr Fisher.

Rating of Woodlands.

As a result of the Rating Circular which was issued by the Local Government Board in April, 1910, at the suggestion of the Sub-Committee appointed by the British Timber Conference, a large number of succcessful appeals against the present assessment of woodlands has been made, some of which have been recorded in the pages of the Journal. Your Secretary has been in communication with over 200 estates in England from which applications for information on the subject have been received.

Legislation Committee.

This Committee met in London in December last, and a full report of their deliberations will be found in the April Journal.

With regard to the Taxation of Woodlands, Messrs Leslie Wood and M. C. Duchesne were appointed to draw up a full statement of the case with regard to local and Imperial taxation, and their report is now in type and under consideration by the Council. The subject is one of great difficulty and the Council wish to record their thanks to Messrs Wood and Duchesne for the great amount of work given by them to the question.

The Development Commissioners invited the Society to appoint two representatives to give evidence before the Forestry Committee in reference to the Society's resolutions, and your President, Mr Pratt, and Dr. Somerville were appointed.

Railway rates is also having the attention of the Committee.

A Conference was held between selected members of the Royal Scottish Arboricultural Society and your Society, and a report of which also appears in the April issue of the Journal.

Forestry Examination.

A Committee is at present reviewing the rules for the Society's Examination in Forestry with a view to making the same more popular, and a report will be issued in due course.

The above report was duly received.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT.

On the proposal of Sir Hugh Beevor, seconded by Mr Marshall, it was unanimously decided to ask the President, Mr E. R. Pratt, to accept office for another year, and further, to telegraph congratulating him upon his satisfactory progress towards recovery and thanking him for his great service on behalf of the Society.

ELECTION OF COUNCIL.

On the motion of Sir Hugh Beevor, the following members of the Council were re-elected:—

Charles Hankins, Culford, Bury St. Edmunds.
George Ross, Hextol Terrace, Hexham.
George Gallie, Sledmere, York.

The following new members were elected:—

ELECTION OF FORESTRY EXAMINERS.

J. B. Braid, Great Witley, Worcester.
J. F. Annand, Armstrong College, Newcastle.
H. A. Pritchard, Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester.
A. G. Hobart-Hampden, Great Missenden.

ELECTION OF JUDGES OF ESSAYS.

On the motion of Sir Hugh Beevor, seconded by Mr George Gallie, the following were appointed:—

A. C. Forbes, Avondale, Rathdrum.
Dr. Augustine Henry, Cambridge.
J. P. Robertson, Chatsworth, Derby.

On the motion of Sir Hugh Beevor, seconded by Dr. Somerville, the following were appointed:—

Wm. Forbes, West Bilney, Kings Lynn.
J. Smith Hill, B.A., The Agricultural College, Aspatria.
Wm. B. Havelock, Brocklesby, Lincolnshire.

COMPETITIVE ESSAYS.

The Judges' report upon the Competitive Essays was read, and the following awards were confirmed:—

Class I.—Confined to Assistant Foresters.

"On points to be considered before and in replanting a wood after a clear cutting," by Robert Butler, Darren, Crickhowell.
Bronze Medal.

Class II.—Open Competition.

Silver Medal.

1912 Summer Meeting.

The following suggestions were made for the 1912 Summer Meeting:—Staffordshire, Scotland, France. As a guide to the Council in fixing the place, a vote was taken for and against going abroad, 14 voting for and 21 against. A vote was then taken between England and Scotland, and 7 voted for England and 25 for Scotland.

Votes of Thanks.

Unanimous votes of thanks were passed to the County Secretaries and Judges of Essays for their services to the Society during the past year.

A vote of thanks to Sir Hugh Beevor concluded the meeting.

THE ANNUAL DINNER.

The Annual Dinner was held in the Hotel Great Central, London, on Thursday, August 16th, 1911, under the presidency of Sir Hugh R. Beevor, Bart. A number of invited guests were present, including Sir Thomas Elliott, K.C.B., Secretary of the Board of Agriculture; Mr T. H. Middleton; Mr C. B. Marshall, Secretary of the Land Agents' Society, and others.

The toast list was as follows:

"The King," proposed by the Chairman.

"The Board of Agriculture and Fisheries," proposed by Dr. Wm. Somerville, and responded to by Sir Thomas Elliott, K.C.B.

"The Royal English Arboricultural Society," proposed by Mr T. H. Middleton, and responded to by Sir Hugh Beevor, Bart.

"The Local Secretary" was proposed by Mr John Graham, and Mr M. C. Duchesne replied.

Owing to the shorthand writer engaged being unable at the last moment to keep his appointment, a report of the speeches unfortunately cannot be given.

THE ROYAL
ENGLISH ARBORICULTURAL SOCIETY

President:
Professor Sir WILLIAM SCHLICH,
K.C.I.E., F.R.S.

Annual Summer Meeting—Yorkshire, 1914.

The Thirty-third Annual Summer Meeting will be held in Yorkshire during the week commencing July 27th. Leeds will be Headquarters, and members will be accommodated at the Metropole and Queen's Hotels. The following is an outline of the programme which has been arranged:—

July 27th.—Members will arrive in Leeds in time for Dinner at 7 p.m.
Council Meeting at 8 p.m.

July 28th.—Visit to Jervaulx Estate, the property of Hector Christie, Esq. Train to Harrogate and motor via Masham and Ellingstring. On this estate there are many excellent plantations, and a short account of same will will be found in the Forestry Journal, Vol. III, Part 4, Page 330.

The Annual General Meeting of the Society will be held at 8·30 p.m. An Agenda is given on next page.

At the close of the Annual Meeting, a Paper will be read by Mr W. D. Young, Forestry Inspector of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, on "Forestry Statistics," to be followed by discussion.

July 29th.—Visit to Fountains Abbey and Studley Royal, the property of the Marquess of Ripon. Train to Ripon and motor to Fountains Abbey. Here will be seen splendid examples of conifers and all the broad leaved trees, many of which have been measured as far back as 1837.

Annual Dinner at 8 p.m. to which guests will be invited.

July 30th.—Visit to the Washburn Valley Afforestation Area, belonging to the Leeds Corporation. Train to Harrogate and motor to Norwood. In the July issue of the Forestry Journal there appears an article from Mr A. Pope, Forester to the Corporation, giving full particulars of the works carried out up to the present time.

Reprints of Mr Pope's letter, and Notes on the Jervaulx and Fountains Abbey Estates by Mr J. F. Annand, M.Sc., together with detailed programme, will be forwarded to each member who intends being present.

Tickets at the reduced rate of a fare and a third will be granted from all stations to Leeds on surrender of a voucher signed by the Secretary. Tickets are available from July 25th to 31st inclusive.

It is estimated that the cost of the tour will be £3 per head.

Members who intend being present must send notice on enclosed form not later than FRIDAY, JULY 17th, accompanied by a deposit of £1.

BACK NUMBERS OF JOURNAL OF FORESTRY.

The Council has decided to offer a limited quantity of back numbers of the JOURNAL at the reduced price of 5/- per Volume, to include postage. Members who do not possess a full set of all the parts are urged to avail themselves of this offer. Orders, accompanied by remittance, should be sent to the Secretary. Single parts can be obtained at 1/3 each, including postage.

MEMBERS' ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Council has arranged for space to be reserved in the JOURNAL for advertisements from members of the Society on payment of a fee of 2/6. It is hoped that this column will be of service to members and that full advantage will be taken of it. Foresters requiring situations or employers requiring foresters will find the JOURNAL a useful medium for advertising their wants. Advertisements under this heading to be sent to the Secretary.

TRADE ADVERTISEMENTS.

It has been suggested to the JOURNAL Committee that it would be a boon to Land Owners, Land Agents, and Foresters, if THE QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF FORESTRY was made a recognised medium for all advertisements connected with Forestry.

Whether wire netting, cresote, saw benches, forest tools, fencing, or plants are required, difficulty is experienced in ascertaining the names of the firms who supply these goods. If the advertisements containing the names and addresses of these firms were inserted in THE QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF FORESTRY (instead of being distributed among so many publications, entailing great labour in finding them) it would (1) make the JOURNAL valuable as a directory of addresses; (2) save the respective firms money now spent in advertising; and (3) be a good source of revenue to the JOURNAL.

The JOURNAL Committee requests the co-operation of members in assisting in this step, and in bringing it to the notice of prospective advertisers.

It is also hoped that as far as practicable and advisable members will take advantage of the advertisements inserted in the JOURNAL, and so encourage advertisers

EXCHANGE OF PLANTS AND SEEDS.

The Society's exchange column for plants or seeds has not in the past been extensively used, and the Council wish to call attention to the official notice that in future any member wishing to advertise plants for exchange or gift (not for sale) may have particulars inserted in the JOURNAL free of charge. All communications to be sent to the Chief Editor.

ANNUAL MEETING, 1912.

It has been decided to hold the 1912 Summer Meeting in Perthshire and Inverness-shire. The exact date has not yet been fixed but will probably be during the week commencing August 12th.
